FOREST GLEN JURY SESSION IN SEVENTH DAY

Deliberations Reach 40-Hour Mark; Jurors Ask for Advice, Then Decline It.

Special to The Star

COLUMBUS, April 7—The Forest Glen, Inc., jury reached the 40-hour mark in its deliberations at noon today and recessed for lunch with no verdict yet in sight.

The morning's court session, held while the jury was deliberating, was enlivened by a lengthy discussion regarding a question the jury had asked at the close of Monday night's deliberation.

At that time, Jury Foreman Floyd Cody of Newport relayed a request that Judge Robert R. Nevin charge be further explained, particularly with reference to the judge's statement about the indictment of the 35 defendants.

The indictment consisted of 10 counts, nine of which charged mail fraud and the other conspiracy.

After receiving the note from the jury Monday night, Judge Nevin recessed the 12 men for the night and instructed both defense and government attorneys to come to an agreement as to how the question should be answered.

Lawyers Consulted

At this morning's opening session U. S. District Attorney Calvin Crawford, speaking for the government, said, "if a reading of a portion of the charge will assist the jury in reaching a verdict, the government certainly thinks it could be done."

Speaking for the defense, Lieutenant Governor Paul Herbert said the defense attorneys could not agree. Herbert said that he was in favor of reading a portion of the charge as the jury had requested.

Grant E. Mouser Jr., a Marion attorney, and Robert Beatty, a Columbus attorney, said they felt the entire two-hour charge should be read. Others felt that the jury's query should go unanswered.

In the event of a negative answer, the judge said he would discuss the matter in simpler language.

Jury Changes Mind

Court Bailiff John Potts was sent to bring the jury to the courtroom.

A minute later, Potts returned with the information that the jury wished to withdraw its question and that the answer was not needed.

The jury was to resume deliberation again at 1:30 this afternoon. If no verdict was reached this afternoon, it was assumed the deliberation would continue again tonight after the jury had recessed for dinner at the Ft. Hayes hotel.

NEWSPAPER PLANNED FOR PLANT WORKERS

To Be Published Weekly for Ordnance Plant Builders.

A four-page weekly paper published in the interests of the employes of contractors building the Scioto Ordnance plant will make its appearance Friday.

The first issue will be published without a name, pending results of a contest among employes for selecting the name of the paper. The editor will be Hube Briers, graduate of Kent State university and a former newspaperman on the Cleveland Plain Dealer and the Akron Beacon Journal.

Mr. Briers came here from the Scioto Ordnance Plant where he was associated with Paul Ryan, former Marion man and former member of the editorial department staff of The Marion Star, in the publication of a newspaper for workers employed by the Atlas Powder Co., operators of the plant.

Plans of the paper to be published here will be about one-fourth the size of standard newspaper pages. It will contain news and photographs of interest to construction workers, and its only circulation will be among plant workers.

In addition to serving as editor of the paper, Mr. Briers also is a reporter.

Col. John Huling Jr. will be the sole judge of the name for the paper, but all entries should be addressed to the editor care of the Atkin-Conkey offices.

The paper will be distributed free among the construction workers.

BATAAN ARMIES LOSE HEAVILY

Both Sides Suffer Many Casualties in Furious Jap Attack.

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, April 7—The war department reported today that heavy casualties on both sides marked the furious fighting along the Bataan peninsula front in the Philippines, with the enemy continuing to score "some success" in repeated heavy attacks against the center of the line.

A communique said that aerial bombing of the rear areas and the south coast of Bataan was particularly severe throughout yesterday.

Anti-aircraft batteries destroyed a Japanese amphibian plane on the water in Manila bay with horizontal fire.

There was a two-hour enemy artillery barrage from the Cavite shore of the bay against Corregidor and Fort Hughes, the department reported, but no damage and no casualties resulted, and the guns of the forts laid down a counter-battery fire.

The department also reported a conference in Australia between General Douglas MacArthur, commanding the United Nations forces there, and Dr. Hubertus Van Mook, acting head of the Netherlands Indies government. The latter informed MacArthur that resistance to the Japanese invasion continued in Java, with two forces of considerable size, well supplied with food and munitions, engaging a considerable enemy force in fierce fighting in the interior jungles and mountains of Java.

American submarines were complicating the Japanese supply problem. The navy reported yesterday that one submarine had sunk an enemy freighter in Japanese waters. Another was credited with sinking two heavily-laden Japanese tankers near the Caroline islands, just east of the Philippines.

HUNT STILL ON FOR LIEUT. RALPH DAVIS

Parents Without Official Word from Missing Airman.

No word had come at noon today to the parents of Lt. Ralph Davis, U. S. army air corps pilot who has been missing since late Friday night when his plane fell in North Carolina on the edge of the "Great Dismal Swamp."

The parents, Attorney and Mrs. Z. P. Davis of Wellston, formerly of Marion, were spending today with Mrs. Davis' brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. L. D. May of 137 Chicago avenue. Mr. Davis said there was a possibility word might come this afternoon.

The plane, almost buried in the swamp, was sighted by planes scouting over the area where it and two others fell. Pilots of the other two planes reached safety and engaged in the rescue work.

DURABLE GOODS DEADLINE SET

Production of Most Lines Will Be Stopped by May 31, Nelson Says.

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, April 7—Production of most consumer durable goods will be stopped by May 31, Donald M. Nelson, war production head, disclosed today.

Declaring that "history will record whether we have moved too fast or too slow" in the drive to curtail civilian industries and convert them to war production, Nelson said the high point of the program would be reached in a few days with issuance of orders halting most private building construction and prohibiting use of iron and steel in hundreds of items.

"Their impact here and abroad will be widespread and sweeping," the WPB chief predicted, adding that the two orders were part of a pattern, carefully planned by WPB, which changes "the face of American industry."

The goal of the program is a "sound but lean civilian economy," Nelson declared, adding that no one yet knew how "lean" it can be but that it will "get leaner and leaner as the war program goes on."

"We're taking away from the people things which make the standard of living," Nelson said in his discussion of the changes at a press conference, but "this is the way of total all-out war and the price of early victory."

Industrial "casualties" in the conversion drive would be just as inevitable as deaths on the battle field, he continued, "but we hope there will be as few as possible."

In the most optimistic picture of war production so far painted by him, Nelson nevertheless reported that the over-all army, navy and maritime commission estimated requirements—now for the first time "pretty well defined"—were "in some cases greater than we can produce in 1942 and perhaps even in 1943."

The stop-construction order and the steel curtailment order now pending represent steps "as important to victory as the winning of a major battle," the production chief said.

"They mark the suspension of the consumers durable goods metal industry and the civilian construction industry," he asserted. "They make possible the complete conversion of the men, materials and machine tools formerly devoted to these pursuits to war production."

The only civilian construction permitted under the building order would be such items as "a chicken coop, a barn or a porch," Nelson said.

The steel order "will prohibit at an early date" the use of iron and steel in hundreds of metal products and goes beyond that to the point of prohibiting use of other metals and scarce plastics as substitutes, Nelson disclosed.

MOBILIZATION SET FOR DEFENSE UNITS

Scheduled for April 13. Starting at 7:30 P. M.

Monday, April 13, has been set as the date for the first complete mobilization of all air raid wardens, motorcycle units and airplane spotters, it was announced today by Frank Kette, chief air raid warden of the council of civilian defense. The mobilization will be between 7:30 and 8:30 p. m. Just how the warning signal will be given will be announced at a later date, Mr. Kette said.

In addition to the air raid wardens mobilization there will be a mobilization of the police unit at the direction of E. M. Breithaupt, head of the auxiliary public units.

Ward captains are asked to get in touch with their precinct leaders and all are expected to be in readiness for the mobilization. There will be no blackout, Mr. Kette states.

Each warden is asked to equip himself with at least 100 feet of clothesline and an arm band, such as a sleeve marker or some other distinguishing marking that will designate him as a warden.

The air raid wardens will be expected to report any unusual happenings in their jurisdiction and also any vacancies in the territory to the newly-established control office in the North State Street school.

Marion's approaching housing problem was defined in clear-cut terms and first local steps toward meeting it were outlined when Lt. Col. John Huling Jr., commanding officer of the Scioto Ordnance Plant, met with 30 representative building contractors, builders' supply dealers, plumbers and realtors last night in the Chamber of Commerce office.

As a result of the meeting, Mayor Snare, who was present, will write a letter to Col. Huling who will forward it with his recommendation to war department officials in an effort to speed priorities for building materials here. Action on priorities, those present agreed, is the No. 1 need to clear the way for a wave of locally-sponsored building.

Some of the highlights of information presented at the meeting, most of it by Col. Huling, are:

Marion will need several thousand new homes to meet the ordnance plant housing problem.

Contractors and supply dealers estimated private individuals here are ready to start more than 100 homes when uncertainty about priorities is cleared.

The federal government probably will step in with a housing program to bridge whatever gap remains after local builders have indicated their intentions.

The housing problem is not one of providing living quarters for several thousand construction workers, who are expected to be absorbed through rented sleeping rooms, but for the several thousand persons to be employed in the operation of the plant when it is completed.

A very limited number of barracks type buildings "to house workers employed in operating the plant" will be built on the plant site, but even these may be used for offices rather than for living quarters. No barracks for construction workers will be provided.

The Scioto Ordnance Plant will be a "fine plant" with valuable facilities, better than most built during the last war. Typical feature: it will have concrete floors.

Although Marion may be placed in a critical defense housing area and given other area designations for preference in getting building materials, priorities will be granted for individual projects, not for the city as a whole. When some of the area designations are granted, you, for example, probably will be able to get priorities to build a house to rent or sell to a defense worker, but you can't build it for yourself to live in (unless you're a defense worker) even if you are now in a rented home.

Need Comfortable Homes

Col. Huling, the first to speak, said one of the approaching bottlenecks in war plants here and elsewhere is the matter of getting workers. With the draft taking more men every day and more plants going into production, the problem is becoming steadily more acute. "That means you can't get workers and hold them unless you have homes for them where they can be fairly comfortable—they'll just go on to some other place to work," he said.

Experience elsewhere has indicated Marion and the immediate vicinity should be able to absorb the several thousand workers to be employed in construction work, he said. Most of them either are single men or men willing to leave their homes for the duration of the construction period. "I believe the people of the community will open their homes to these men and provide enough sleeping rooms to take care of them," he said. "For this reason it has been decided no barracks will be built to house construction workers."

The Real Problem

Turning to a discussion of housing the workers who will operate the plant, he pointed out this presents the real problem. Later he indicated the problem probably will begin to develop in about six months. The number of shifts to be employed has not been determined, but several thousand workers will be required for each shift.

The most desirable step toward meeting this problem is for private capital to proceed with more permanent homes, but experience in other cities has indicated local capital can not do the job alone, he said.

Another possibility is the splitting up of large houses into multiple living units, but this would provide relatively few more apartments.

Although the influx of workers will reach large proportions, it will come about gradually since operations will be started with small trained groups instructing others, and the employment will gradually grow to a peak, he said. However, construction of homes is such a slow process that steps should be taken toward meeting the problem long before it arrives, he pointed out.

Materials Problem

Mayor Snare raised the question of getting materials for construction work or remodeling of homes into apartments. Col. Huling answered he would be glad to give support to any proper move to have Marion placed in a defense housing area, and cited a recent visit to Marion of a National Housing agency representative.

Louis E. Michel, secretary of the Chamber, pointed out this housing authority representative already has recommended to Washington that Marion be given defense housing area ratings. He added that whereas a few days ago officials were under the impression a rating of A-2 for building supplies would clear the way for work here, a new development had placed wiring on an A-1-J rating, complicating the problem. "Now we'll have to see also if we can get the necessary priority for wiring," he said.

When one builder asked if the federal government provided any aid in extending sewer lines to speed new construction work, Col. Huling said the government had in some instances provided some help to communities but wasn't sure whether sewer extension funds might be obtained.

In answer to another question, he said experience in other places indicated plants such as the one here usually started operations on a small scale within six months of the time construction work began. He added that operations are begun before all construction work is completed.

Question of Permanency

When asked about the permanency of the plant, he answered by saying that the question could not be answered definitely, but cited some ordnance plants that continued many years after the end of the last war. He also said, "This will be a fine plant and it will have many valuable facilities. It will be more permanent than most of those built during the

WOULD LIMIT INCOMES

DETROIT, April 7 — United Automobile Workers (CIO) executive board proposed today a legal limit of $25,000 a year on family and individual incomes for the war's duration, in return for which union workers would accept non-negotiable defense bonds in lieu of all overtime pay for more than 40 hours a week.

THURSDAY

PUBLIC TO SEE SCHOOL SHOP

Inspection Date Set; Tentative Plans for Graduation Ceremonies Made.

Thursday night, April 16, was set for a public inspection of the new Harding High school vocational shop and home economics department and Friday, May 29, was tentatively set for the 1942 graduation ceremonies at a monthly meeting of the board of education yesterday afternoon with Supt. E. E. Holt at the administration building.

The board also made one teacher appointment, heard a report on national defense training classes, and set Monday night, April 20, as the date for a meeting with the budget commission and representatives of the Marion Education association and the municipal government to discuss the schools' financial situation in connection with a request of the association's salary committee for an immediate increase in teachers' salaries.

Acting upon the suggestion by letter of Gerald E. Irons, commissioner of school housing and boundaries for the Cleveland board of education, the board decided to arrange later for an evening meeting to hear his findings in a recent school housing survey for which he was employed by the board.

To Submit Recommendations

Mr. Irons suggested that board members study mimeographed copies of his findings prior to his meeting with the board to discuss at length his recommendations.

In reply to a letter from the superintendent in which the stepped-up war production program was mentioned in connection with school housing, Mr. Irons wrote that "the possibility of such a development was mentioned to me while I was there and I kept it in mind in making my survey," Mr. Irons made his survey in February.

"It relieves my mind a lot if he had that in mind when making the survey," Mr. Holt said.

Indications are that the board will be supplied with copies of the survey findings soon and that shortly thereafter Mr. Irons will meet with the board to discuss his survey in detail.

E. L. Heusch, state supervisor of vocational trades and industries, has accepted an invitation to speak on a 30-minute program preceding the public inspection of the vocational shop and home economics department.

New Shop Program

The program will start at 8 and will be held in the east assembly hall at the high school. In addition to Mr. Heusch's talk there will be music by one of the high school groups, invocation by a Marion pastor and remarks by Superintendent Holt, representing the board, and a representative of the National Youth Administration which assisted with the shop project.

Guides will show visitors through the new shops and the home economics department.

In tentatively setting commencement date the board also approved the selection of Dr. Louis A. Pechstein, dean of the college of education at the University of Cincinnati, as the commencement speaker. He is a former dean of the education college at the University of Rochester, N. Y., and is an author of pedagogical books.

Franc C. Robinson, board member whose son Glenn is a member of the class of '42, was designated to present the diplomas on behalf of the board.

Miss Jean Witt of Marion, who was granted a leave of absence this year to continue her studies, was appointed to teach for the 1942-43 school year, "her assignment and salary to be determined

JAP ADVANCE LOSING STING

Spectacular Advances in First Four Months of War Slowing Down.

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, April 7—The lightning has gone out of Japan's war after four months of spectacular advances, military men agreed today.

They expect further enemy gains and possibly such a bold new stroke as an attack on Siberia. But concentrations of allied air power in Australia and India have stemmed the main Japanese onrush.

Here is the view of military and naval men as the war enters its fifth month:

The United Nations are approaching, if they have not actually attained, numerical air-plane equality with Japan in the Australia and Burma-India theaters.

This was shown March 11 in the smashing of the first big invasion thrust at Australia before it could even get under way from New Guinea. It was shown again last week-end when a "Pearl Harbor" attack on Ceylon became a bitter Japanese defeat.

Over the western Pacific as a whole, however, Japan still has

J. P. PROBST QUITS RATIONING OFFICE

Resigns as Marion Co. Tire Ration Coordinator.

John P. Probst has announced his resignation as Marion county tire rationing coordinator in a letter to Mayor R. C. Snare and to the state head of the tire rationing board.

In the letter, he stated he was resigning because of the time demanded by the job.

Mr. Probst was appointed to the position by the Marion county defense council at the request of the state rationing board immediately following the inauguration of the tire rationing program.

Although the resignation as announced is effective as of April 1, it is understood Mr. Probst will continue temporarily on the job until a new appointment is made.

Tire Rationing Hits High School Athletics

COLUMBUS, April 7—Ohio's far-flung high school athletic program suffered a setback today under a federal tire rationing ruling restricting use of school buses to the transportation of students to and from classes.

Inwood Smith, former Ohio State athletic star and state tire rationing coordinator, said the federal ruling specifically prevented buses bearing tires issued under the rationing regulations from transporting athletic teams or taking any kind of "excursion."

W. R. Townsend, state high school athletic commissioner, said he expected to the ruling to result in drastic modification of next fall's scholastic football program, and to cut deeply into the entry list of this spring's track meets.

BOMBINGS FAIL TO PUT NATION ON ALLIED SIDE

U. S. Envoy Confers with White House In Attempt To Bring Decision.

By The Associated Press

With Japanese bombers already attacking her cities, leaders of invasion-threatened India's 390,000,000 still stood at full wartime cooperation with Britain and the United Nations today amid signs that negotiations again were breaking down.

In an apparent eleventh-hour attempt to prevent a collapse of the discussions, President Roosevelt's envoy, Louis Johnson, was disclosed to have been in touch with the White House regarding developments.

Johnson talked anew with Maulana Abul Kalam Azad, president of the All-India Congress party, and with Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru, powerful former president of the Congress, after Nehru had declared:

"We are remained united in slavery, and we shall remain united in freedom."

Opposes Division

Nehru indicated he would oppose any attempt to break up India into separate states, as might occur under the British plan, asserting:

"I don't know what the future will bring, but this country is one country."

The British government, through its special envoy, Sir Stafford Cripps, has offered India post-war dominion status, with the right for individual states to secede, in return for help in the fight against the axis. Under the plan, Britain would direct India's defenses for the duration of the war.

Informed sources at New Delhi, the Indian capital, said it was likely that the congress would demand assurances that in a post-war constitutional assembly the Indian states would be represented by popularly elected representatives and not delegates of the ruling princes.

Dispatches from New Delhi said Sir Stafford was expected to make an announcement tomorrow on the success or failure of his mission.

As the negotiations continued, the city of Madras on India's bay of Bengal coast, underwent its first air-raid alarm, lasting an hour and 25 minutes.

British Fall Back

In Burma, British headquarters acknowledged that British troops again had fallen back to new positions only 65 miles below the main oil-producing section of Minbu after demolishing oil installations at Thayetmyo and Allanmyo.

This indicated a British withdrawal of at least 40 miles, since Thayetmyo is 40 miles north of Prome, the former right wing anchor of the British-Chinese defense line in central Burma. Allanmyo is just north across the Irrawaddy river from Thayetmyo, about 225 miles from the Indian frontier.

"Our forces are still in the process of taking up their new positions which are now north of Thayetmyo," the British communique said.

Final capitulation of the allied defenders of Sumatra, rubber-rich Netherlands East Indies island upon which the Japanese sprang Feb. 14 from Malaya, was announced by Imperial Tokyo headquarters. They claimed the

PAYROLL BOND PLAN AWARDS OFFERED

Firms To Get Recognition for Workers' Cooperation.

Certificates of award will be given to all firms having a payroll defense bond savings plan which includes 90 per cent or more of the employes, Elmer J. Schoenlaub, chairman of Marion county's defense bond and stamp committee, announced today.

The certificate, issued by the treasury department, will entitle the firm to purchase and display a flag that will designate outstanding cooperation in the savings bond program.

Before a certificate may be awarded, it is necessary that the following information be supplied: (1) the name, address and total number of people employed, (2) total number of employes participating in the plan and (3) the total or average weekly or monthly subscriptions.

Mr. Schoenlaub said certificates will be given as soon as possible after the firm has complied with the stipulations and is participating with at least 90 per cent or more of its employes.

CHAPTER TWENTY-SIX

No Good

BUT on the way to New York, Melissa fought for and mastered a measure of self-control that for made away for tears. Her heart was broken, one was done with love—because she had given Randy all the love her eager young heart could hold and now that heart was completely empty.

But she was young, not yet twenty and she was beautiful, and life was long. She would have to fill her life so with activity that she would not have time to grieve for her lost love.

She had been terrified of New Orleans when, then from the quiet and remoteness of the Point, she had reached there. But when she stepped off the train at Pennsylania Station and New York burst upon her, she was appalled. She had a moment of wild panic in which she wanted to turn and run back to the train and beg to be taken back to the River Queen.

A friendly voice spoke at her elbow and she turned to find Todd Beasley there, smiling, welcoming her, turning to a pleasant woman in her late forties, smart and expensive-looking, and saying: "Well, here she is, my dear —Mrs. Marlowe, my wife."

Melissa said in a little wave ruan of delight and gratitude: "Oh, but how kind of you to meet me! I was frightened stiff—"

Ann Beasley said frankly "And well you might be, my lamb. This is a wicked old city for pretty little girls like you. But don't let its false face scare you! Run from it and it'll tear you to pieces. Stand up and face it and dare it to do its worst—and it will purr like a cream-fed kitten. It's just a big bluff—"

The taxi managed to fight its way into the stream of northbound traffic, the driver exchanging insults with a truck-driver who refused to give an extra inch of room. The noise to Melissa was incredible; she listened to it, awed, and wondered that people could go about their business, indifferent to the terrific roar made up of a thousand and one different sounds.

They left Melissa at her hotel, promising to come back for her at seven and take her to dinner. And in the room assigned to her, Melissa stood very still for a moment, drawn to her full height, and bravely faced the specter of the future. Randy was gone forever—but life was left and youth and ambition. She'd have to do the best she could with those.

Work-Out

On the fourth morning after her arrival in New York, Melissa appeared at the studio, guided by Ann, for her first rehearsal. Her program was to consist of thirty minutes twice a week; she was to work with a celebrated radio orchestra, with an occasional guest-star.

To Melissa, there was nothing unusual about it, because she was too ignorant of radio to realize that new coast-to-coast hook-ups are not usually chosen from small town singers with as little experience as she had had. Nor could she understand the tense little group of thirty or more people in the small studio when she appeared for her first rehearsal.

She was not nervous. She was apathetic. Somehow she couldn't make herself feel that all this was terribly important. She had a queer, sick, lifeless sort of feeling as though all the brightness and eagerness had gone out of her.

Ann said swiftly, just as the orchestra leader signalled his readiness: "Don't be scared, kiddy—don't be nervous. It's only a 'mike'."

"I'm not nervous," answered Melissa so quietly that Ann stared at her sharply, obviously unpleasantly startled by her quiet.

There wasn't time for more. Melissa stepped before the microphone and Ann, looking frightened and uneasy, sat down beside her husband, who was frankly very nervous indeed.

The orchestra played the opening bars of the selected song, and then Melissa tipped her head back a little and began to sing. There was a tense quiet throughout the studio, and when she had finished the number, everybody very carefully avoided his neighbor's eyes, and the orchestra leader mopped his brow a little and looked sharply at Todd Beasley, who nodded.

Another song, Melissa sang again. And when she had finished, Todd said quietly, "That's enough for now, Melissa."

Todd and the orchestra leader had their heads together in a close conference. It was plain the orchestra leader was arguing hotly and vehemently, but Todd only went on shaking his head and looking a little grimmer every minute.

He came over to Ann and Melissa after a moment and, avoiding Ann's anxious eyes, said briskly, "Jerry has made an excellent suggestion. He feels that Melissa should have some work with Allan Barton—"

Ann gave a little excited gasp of intense relief.

An appointment was made and she was taken by Todd uptown to the huge, skylighted, cluttered-looking studio where Allan Barton lived and worked. He was a big man, paunchy, with bright blue eyes in a round, cherubic face, eyes that were cold and blue as polished marbles that children play with.

When Todd had finished his explanation of Melissa's presence and the fact that within two weeks she was to open a new radio program, Allan Barton turned to her sharply and barked, "Scream for help."

Melissa stared at him, wide-eyed. "What?" she gasped, quite sure she hadn't heard him correctly.

"Scream for help," snapped Barton furiously. "But loud—as if you really meant it."

Anger burned in Melissa's breast and she tipped her head back, drew a deep breath, and screamed with all her might: "Help! Help! Police!"

"Ah," said Barton pleased. "Maybe we can do something with you after all."

Todd said eagerly, "Then you'll take her on, Barton? We've only got a couple of weeks—"

"We'll work," said Barton firmly, and the look in his eyes as they rested on Melissa was almost malevolent. "Right now I am free. I can give her four hours a day—if she can take it."

"She'll take it—and like it," promised Todd grimly, "beginning now."

Defeat

And then began that very day the most gruelling experience Melissa had ever known. Barton was a martinet; some of his ideas, such as having her scream now and then to test and strengthen her lungs, seemed to her downright idiotic. But he yelled and swore and raged at her and often reduced her to tears—and seemed pleased when he had and, before she could control the tears, made her sing.

She stuck to it gamely, day after day, going back to the hotel to tumble into bed too exhausted for anything but sleep. And then one day she overheard Barton and Todd talking.

Todd said something that she could not understand in a soothing tone and then Barton snarled furiously, knowing perfectly well that she could hear every word, "Well, maybe she could sing on a Mississippi show boat, but he can't sing here, Beasley, you're a fool. Buy up her contract—send her back to Mississippi—"

Melissa pushed open the door and stood facing them, her face quite white above the soft ruddy beauty of the cherished fur scarf.

"He doesn't have to buy up my contract, Mr. Barton," she said levelly. "Nor do you have to waste any more of your valuable time bullying me. I never wanted to sing on the radio anyway, and I [illegible] be buried [illegible] to get [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] next year."

And because of the [illegible] tears in the [illegible] room, she was buried and [illegible] of her career, but into the [illegible] to the elevator. She couldn't [illegible] turn on the button, but before the car answered her summons, Todd was [illegible] her, saying [illegible] but with a hurt [illegible] under her elbow guiding her [illegible] the descending elevator.

Outside, one glance at her face told him more [illegible] probably she was fighting her tears, and he lifted his stick to signal a passing taxi. He helped her into it and to the driver: "Through the Park, and follow her into the car."

"What's wrong, Melissa?" asked Todd quietly. "I heard you sing on the show boat, and there was something about your voice that made me sure you'd be a sensation on the radio."

She set her teeth hard for a moment and then she said [illegible] "I suppose it was because I was happy on the show boat. I was singing right out of my heart. And now—well, I don't think I'll ever be happy again."

"It was a man, of course," said Todd grimly. "It always is in cases like these. Who was it? Any chance of getting him up here?"

Melissa shook her head. "Randy'd never come to New York, and even if he would, he doesn't really love me. I was a fool to think he would—"

"Randy?" Todd repeated. "Do you mean Ace Hendricks, the man who owned the show boat?"

"Of course," said Melissa and her voice shook a little. "We were going to be married. I told you—remember? And then he—well, he changed his mind."

"Oh, he did, did he?" said Todd and there was a curious, almost startled look on his face.

They drove for a little in silence, and then Todd leaned forward and spoke to the taxi-

The frame has gone out of style, but the sentiment always burns fervently in the American People—especially today. For the home is the heart of America.

When we say "home," we do not mean "house."

Our "house" can be destroyed by a bomb, but our "home"—never. For the American home is different. It's not the four walls and a roof that matter, but what's inside them.

Most important ingredient, of course, is the great spirit of the American People, to be found in every home, in every family . . . the spirit of courage, optimism and determination . . . the good health . . . the fierce love of freedom . . . the enjoyment of life, liberty and civilization.

Another important part of the American home is our standard of living. Better homefurnishings contribute vital rest and relaxation to refresh our workers, and time and labor-saving devices enable us to devote a greater part of our working day and our energy to the defense of America.

We in the furniture industry are proud of our modest part in making the American home the finest in the world—the mightiest spiritual fortress in the world.

The brutal, unjustified attacks on our country will be beaten off, for ours is the righteous cause. God will bless our homes. We Americans will defend them. And, together, We will win this war as We have won all the others.

The Stars Say—

For Wednesday, April 8.

A DAY OF almost revolutionary and amazing adventures or experiences is predicted from the ruling planetary influences. While these strange and thrilling circumstances may be the crises of a sudden and decisive swing from static, crystalized and unproductive matters, it may require sound judgment, tact, tenacity and acumen to profitably react to unforeseen and peculiar situations and emotional surprise. There may be gifts, inheritance, property or other lucrative benefits to be rescued from strange or bewildering phases. The young and romantic need wise counsel.

Those whose birthday it is may be prepared for a very sudden and perhaps sensational and dramatic turn of events during the year. Radical astral influences may bring about a complete change in affairs from the stagnant and crystalized to the thrilling, adventurous, progressive and romantic. This being swept off the feet by an unpredictable turn of the wheel of destiny has its hazards, however, and must be met with poise and good sense.

A child born on this day should have excellent traits and talents, which might lift it to the heights of accomplishment and renown.

In Two Marion Programs Thursday

Above are the Eureka Jubilee Singers of Chicago, who will give a program of spirituals and plantation songs Thursday night at 8 in the Central Junior High school auditorium. They will provide the program at the Kiwanis club luncheon meeting Thursday noon at Hotel Harding. H. Max Good, founder the director of Soul's Harbor in Columbus, will be with the singers and will speak in a program intermission. For several years the Eureka Singers were on CBS and NBC networks but in recent years they have devoted their time to religious work. For the first half of the program Thursday night the singers will appear in formal dress. The last half they will sing in "cotton field" costume. There will be no admission charge.

Contribution to Red Cross Voted by Eastern Star

A CONTRIBUTION of $25 to the Red Cross fund being raised by Mr. C. May Sharp of Cleveland, worthy grand matron, was voted by Lydia Chapter No. 82, Order of Eastern Star, in a meeting last night at Masonic temple. The grand matron hopes to purchase an ambulance for the Red Cross with funds contributed by all chapters in Ohio.

Sunday, April 19, the chapter will attend the morning worship service at Epworth Methodist church. Mrs. Sharp has requested each chapter in the state to attend at least one worship service in a body sometime during her year as head of the organization.

Last evening's meeting coming on Easter Monday, Miss Catharine Cheney, worthy matron, opened Lodge with an Easter greeting. Visitors were present from Dover, N. J., Columbus and Pittsburgh.

A program of popular music was furnished by Miss Joan Appleby, accordionist, accompanied at the piano by Mrs. Ethyl Case.

The annual anniversary meeting will be held April 20. Charter members, past matrons and past patrons will be guests of honor at a dinner and program.

Willis Parker Host To Juvenile Music Group

"Making Music Mean Something to Me This Year" was the program theme for a meeting of the Marion Juvenile Lecture-Recital club last evening at the home of the president, Willis Parker on Merkel avenue. Richard Mulligan led the members in a renewal of the pledge to "Make American truly musical" and Virginia Augenstein read the national juvenile collect. The following numbers made up the program:

Piano solos, "To a Wild Rose," MacDowell and "Second Mazurka," Godard, by Patricia Anne Scholl; violin solo, "Lullaby," Bennett, by Connie Erwin; vocal solo, "My Own America," Wiedoeft, by Jean Todd, accompanied by Miss Mary Kathryn Alnutt, club counselor; baritone horn solo, "Intermezzo," Mascagni, by Willis Parker accompanied by Mrs. Leonard Parker; piano duet, "Up In the Swing," Montaine, by Jacqueline and Barbara Price.

Miss Alnutt was in charge of the study topic, "Felix Mendelssohn," Bartholdy, and discussed the subjects studied this year. Recordings of a radio program over WJRN in which the host took part and also recordings of horn duets played by the host and his father, Leonard Parker, accompanied by Mrs. Parker, provided entertainment. Mrs. Parker was hostess for a social hour. Taking part in a program at the next meeting May 3 at the home of Robert Smith on Windsor street, will be Patricia Youngelood, Martha Anne Schoenlaub, Jean Todd, Virginia Augenstein and Robert Smith.

WALDO GIRL AND MARION SOLDIER EXCHANGE VOWS

Esther Lauchner and Pvt. Robert Hinaman Wed in Kansas.

Mr. and Mrs. John Lauchner of near Waldo announce the marriage of their daughter Esther to Private Robert E. Hinaman, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Hinaman of north of Marion.

The ceremony was read Easter Sunday morning at 11:30 o'clock in the parsonage of Emanuel Lutheran church at Junction City, Kans., by Rev. A. D. Schlegel.

Private and Mrs. Paul Roberts, formerly of Marion, were the best man and matron of honor.

The bride wore a man-tailored suit of California tan made with beige hat and luggage tan accessories, and a corsage of gardenias. Mrs. Roberts was in a beige and brown ensemble with beige hat and brown accessories and a corsage of pink rosebuds. The attendants were presented gifts.

After the ceremony a wedding dinner was served at Hotel Bartell. A large wedding cake decorated with a miniature bride and bridegroom centered the table. Mr. and Mrs. Henry Roberts of Marion were guests.

Mrs. Hinaman, a graduate of the Waldo High school in 1939, is employed at the Union bus depot in Junction City. Private Hinaman, a graduate of Harding High school in 1936, is in officers training school at the cavalry replacement training center at Fort Riley, Kans. Prior to his induction in January he was an insurance agent for the Marion County Farm Bureau.

Pull the Trigger on Constipation, with Ease for Stomach, too

When constipation brings on discomfort after meals, stomach upset, bloating, dizzy spells, gas, coated tongue, and bad breath, your stomach is probably "crying the blues" because your bowels don't move. It calls for Laxative-Senna to pull the trigger on those lazy bowels, combined with Syrup Pepsin for perfect ease to your stomach in taking. For years, many Doctors have given pepsin preparations in their prescriptions to make medicine more agreeable to a touchy stomach. So be sure your laxative contains Syrup Pepsin. Insist on Dr. Caldwell's Laxative Senna combined with Syrup Pepsin. See how wonderfully the Laxative Senna wakes up lazy nerves and muscles in your intestines to bring welcome relief from constipation. And the good old Syrup Pepsin makes this laxative so comfortable and easy on your stomach. Even finicky children love the taste of this pleasant family laxative. Take Dr. Caldwell's Laxative Senna combined with Syrup Pepsin, as directed on label or as your doctor advises, and feel world's better. Get genuine Dr. Caldwell's.

175 Greet Marion Couple at Golden Wedding Event

MR. AND MRS. JOHN H. BAIN received 175 friends and relatives Sunday afternoon and evening at the home of their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Carl W. Leffler of 224 South Green wood street, in celebration of their golden wedding anniversary. Hostesses for the informal reception were their daughters, Mrs. Leffler and Mrs. Fred M. Rankin of Akron.

Myriads of flowers, many of them bearing congratulatory messages to the celebrants filled the rooms. The decorative theme was gold and white and for refreshments the motifs were in keeping with the anniversary. Assisting were Mrs. James Bain, Mrs. George Bain and Mrs. T. E. Kinnear.

Joining the celebrants for a family dinner and the reception were their children and grandchildren, Mr. and Mrs. Leffler and children William of Cleveland, and Annabelle who returned recently from Iowa State college where she was graduated March 20 in household equipment and foods and Dr. and Mrs. Fred M. Rankin and children, George and Phyllis of Akron. Because of school schedules two grandchildren, Fred Rankin Jr., a student at Dartmouth, and Nancy Rankin who is at Wellesley, were unable to be present.

Mr. and Mrs. Bain were presented many gifts in remembrance of the occasion.

Restrictions

When someone commented that a number of restrictions had to be met to get federal loans for ... construction, Mayor Snare answered this wasn't objectionable because "we don't want houses that are going to depreciate the value of other properties in the neighborhood where they're built."

In answer to a question, Col. Huling said the percentage of plant workers who might be housed in trailers was a matter of conjecture, adding that maybe trailers won't be available for all that want them.

When someone asked if the federal government would step in and build houses on a wholesale basis if local builders didn't meet the problem, Col. Huling answered, "I should think they would. We've got to run this war."

Mr. Michel brought up the fact that Marion banks are prepared to make money available for sound construction projects. After a brief discussion of this, the group agreed that priorities rather than financing was the immediate problem.

War Department Aid

Mayor Snare said he and Col. Huling together had contacted the war department by telephone and had received assurance that its help would be given in having Marion placed in a critical defense housing area, and that it would go along as far as possible in having any emergency federal building program here conform to the community's wishes.

In answer to a question, Mr. Michel said he is uncertain whether more than Marion city would be placed in a critical defense housing area. In most cases, the area extends a number of miles around a plant, he said.

The discussion led to an agreement that Mayor Snare, with the backing of the group, will write a letter to Col. Huling seeking his and the war department's help in speeding action on having Marion placed in a defense housing area. When the effectiveness of this move was discussed, Col. Huling said, "I've been led to believe it will go through."

Meanwhile, Mr. Michel said representatives of the National Housing Agency and the FHA are expected in Marion within a few days and that their suggestions probably will help speed along priorities for building materials here.

Priorities Discussed

The meeting ended in a discussion of priorities in which an apparent misunderstanding was cleared through an explanation by Mr. Michel. Although he prefaced his remarks with the statement that he had only a general understanding of how the priorities problem will be handled, he said he understood a housing agency official probably will arrange to spend two or three days a week in Marion to act on priority applications. A proposed project, whether it be new construction or remodeling, must be set up and presented with an application for priorities to cover the needed materials, he said. Then each project will be considered on its merits. If it's to provide living quarters to be rented to a defense worker and his family, it probably will go through. If it's an application to build a house for a non-defense worker who simply wants a new home for himself, it probably won't be granted, he said.

Contractor's Question

When several of the building contractors said they have been swamped with telephone inquiries about remodeling and construction projects but didn't know how to answer them because of the uncertainty about priorities, Mr. Michel answered that "neither you nor the person that is asking you about the job can settle the uncertainty about priorities until you figure the job, find out what it's to be used for and submit it for consideration on its own merits. And furthermore, it's useless to apply for priorities until we get the defense housing and critical defense housing area ratings. However, we've been virtually assured we're going to get these ratings, and the National Housing Agency is advising Marion residents and contractors especially to go ahead and figure out plans for any project they have in mind that will provide housing for defense workers. By the time the plans are ready we hope to have the necessary ratings for Marion that will clear the way for priorities on deserving projects." He explained that the term defense worker didn't apply just to persons employed in the Scioto Ordnance Plant, pointing to the fact that the bulk of Marion's industrial concerns are devoting most of their production to war and defense products.

One contractor said he has a client ready to proceed at once with 50 new homes if he can get a city sewer line extended and be sure of getting materials. Others said they knew of dozens of projects ready to go if priorities could be assured.

MRS. C. M. LIGGETT CLAIMED BY DEATH

Former Star Employe Dies at Cardington Home.

Special to The Star

CARDINGTON, April 7—Mrs. Zula Mae Liggett, 60, wife of Clifford M. Liggett and a former linotype operator on The Marion Star, died at 4:10 p. m. yesterday at her home here. She had been ill two months.

A native of LaRue, where she was born Feb. 21, 1882 to William H. and Lucinda Judd, Mrs. Liggett moved to Marion from LaRue in 1906. Her marriage to Mr. Liggett took place Nov. 3, 1917. She was a linotype operator on the Marion Mirror and later was employed with The Star. She resigned her work with the Star in 1931. Mr. and Mrs. Liggett returned three weeks ago from Florida where they spent the winter.

Do you know that
LARD is 97%
DIGESTIBLE
and no fat is more digestible than that?

Just as science has proved that LARD is a superior cooking fat, so scientific experiments have also shown that 97 per cent of LARD is utilized by the body. No other cooking fat ranks higher! This means that LARD is almost completely digested! LARD is a valuable food, and it is economical and good, too. When you use LARD, you are using a fine product and you are also helping the farmer who produces it. When you thus help the farmers of your own community, you are increasing the prosperity of your own home town.

Battle of the Bombers

SOMETHING like the aerial warfare predicted before war began now is taking place between British and German air forces. They are trying to obliterate each other's production facilities behind the lines. The battle of the bombers is on. Instead of being one-sided, as it was in 1940, when Germany started it, the battle now is nip-and-tuck, with the British claiming to be giving more than they are taking, though the Germans are beginning to retaliate in force for the raids they have had to endure in the last few months while their air force apparently was busy in Russia.

The battle of the bombers raises one question that is not being answered. If the British claims of systematic destruction of factories on the continent are valid, what must be assumed about the success of the German raids? Even when they were at the peak of their fury in the autumn of 1940, the British never acknowledged that they accomplished the objective of industrial destruction which must have been their main purpose. Yet, the British, flying against targets scattered over a much wider area, claim to be doing what they said the Germans weren't able to do. It is a matter that calls for considerably more explanation than has been furnished so far. Otherwise, the British claims are subject to the discount allowable on everything suspected of being propaganda.

Read and Weep

ALMOST everybody who doesn't happen to possess any special information will admit cheerfully that the problem of India's independence is too complicated to understand. Yet, not everything about the Indian situation is that way. There is this paragraph, for instance, from an United Press dispatch:

"British spokesmen indicated that the Japanese landing at Akyab, Burmese port on the Bay of Bengal, 75 miles from the Indian border and 320 miles east of Calcutta, has heightened the urgency of Sir Stafford Cripps' mission."

Elsewhere in the same dispatch, it was related that Sir Stafford had been given a free rein to negotiate with India for the best arrangement possible. When something has been worked out—as it undoubtedly will be—the job of raising an Indian army, mobilizing the country for war, getting the materials to the right places, mapping out strategy and training the various specialists needed for the successful prosecution of the kind of war the Japanese are fully prepared to fight can be tackled. This should take, if all goes well, about five years.

Meanwhile, the Japanese, who had reached a point 75 miles from India before the British finally conceded that this was no time to argue but to start acting, will be headed for a celebrative splash in the Ganges river and some candid camera work in the streets of Bombay. Even the reluctant British and the stubborn Indian Nationalists can't be expected to bet their shirts that the Japanese won't be through with their Indian operations before the other side gets into position to say, "Now look here, you yellow rascals."

Bicycles to Battleships

BECAUSE bicycles are a standard fixture, the war production board to ration them where they are needed most becomes a kind of object lesson in managed economy. The American public is beginning now to realize just how far its government is prepared to go in that direction. Everything from bicycles to battleships now is within the government's scope of control, for the purpose of aiding the war effort.

Bicycle manufacturers have tried for years to stimulate sales, with only fair success. The boom ended by the WPB order exceeded their wildest dreams. Suddenly, bicycle stocks were cleaned out; demand for additional stock was insistent; there was no limit in sight. Automobile and tire rationing had done what no amount of promotion could have done; the bicycle had been made an actual necessity in thousands of cases, an imminent necessity in millions of cases.

Under the rules of laissez-faire economy, supply and demand would have been permitted to adjust themselves to each other. Bicycles would have been produced and distributed to satisfy the market, on the assumption that everybody who wanted one should have it if he he could pay for it. But under the rules of managed economy, the government attempts to allocate bicycles where they are needed, not where they are wanted. It assumes the right to control their manufacture and distribution in the name of the national welfare. If anyone was curious about what managed economy meant when it was being discussed some years ago as a peacetime possibility, here is a wartime demonstration. If the authoritarians could have their way, it would always be like this, in peacetime as well as wartime. Not the individual, but his government would decide who was going to ride a bicycle.

AND BE SURE THEY'RE FINE.

News Behind the News

Situation in Burma Serious with Rich Oil Fields at Stake.

By PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, April 7—The situation in Burma is serious. Single objective of the Japs is the oil field, about the only good source left the Chinese for this indispensable food of fighting machines. Dispatches say "Japs bomb Mandalay." They could add that Mandalay has more importance now than Kipling attached to it. A refinery in that area affords China its best supply of gasoline and is what Jap airmen are after. The British fell back from Prome in West Burma and tried to cluster their defense lines around an oil field to the north at their backs. There are four Jap divisions there against one British division. The odds forecast a blow to the Chinese which will tax their ingenuity to find new oil reserves.

Rich Booty

The Japs do not need this oil for themselves, they now have field richer than any except ours in Texas and Venezuela. Around Tarakan in Borneo, there is unlimited "bunker oil" 200 or 300 feet down, only a few hundred feet from the docks. This can be brought into their ships with ordinary water-well digging equipment. No special derricks are needed. The product does not require refining but can be pumped direct into the tanks of diesel warships. Thus the Japs have acquired in four months what the Nazis have fought in vain for two and a half years, the indispensable wherewithal for permanent military power. No way is yet apparent in which the Japs could transport oil to the besieged Hitler, but if a way develops this summer, the war may last many more years than even the most pessimistic have calculated.

False Report

Open published resentment of London at China's premature concession that the strategic West Burma port of Akyab had fallen reflects again carelessness of Chungking and London, in accepting Jap radio claims. Akyab had not fallen when the Chinese announced it. It appears the Chinese were led into the false assumption at least partly by the fact the Japs claimed it. The matter was vital because the loss of Akyab would mean one of the main sources of supplies from India was cut off. Likewise, it is so close to Calcutta, Jap bombing of that industrial area would be easy.

Jap Radio Again

The Australians made a similar mistake a few days earlier. They reported London had announced the fall of Port Moresby, omitting mention of the fact that London said "according to claims by the Tokyo radio." Port Moresby had not fallen and the incidents together suggest everybody has been listening too intently to the Jap radio—that is everybody except Washington. The Tokyo technique is well known here, especially since last Friday. The Japs broadcast at that time decisive claims as a result of their attacks on Corregidor and Bataan. They said,

"United States anti-aircraft batteries put up a severe resistance against the Japanese, but Japanese bombardments on March 24 reduced four-fifths of the batteries, and later bombardments on March 31 shattered the entire batteries (of Corregidor)."

Facts Bad

The facts were as bad as the English used in that claim, or worse. If they had destroyed Corregidor by March 31, what have they been coming back for since then? Sightseeing? If they destroyed the defenses of Corregidor a week ago today, why are they not in there now? Why did they not capture the defenseless fort? On three previous occasions they have claimed "destruction of Corregidor's batteries," but apparently were never satisfied because they have always come back to destroy them again.

The same Tokyo broadcast concluded: "Successful operations on Bataan encountered only small enemy forces." Only one thing was wrong with that. They left off the "un" before the "successful." They could have left a standing announcement for the past few months that the small forces they always encountered on Bataan were always too big for them.

New Partnership of English-Speaking People and New Relations with Far East.

By WALTER LIPPMANN

IN THE relations between the east and the west, the historical record is certain to be far more enlightening than any political formula which can be devised in a time of crisis. The United States is at war in Asia, and in this war we have a principal part to play, not as the arsenal of the United Nations but as a fighting power. For that reason it is necessary that we and our allies should seek to see clearly what we are fighting for in Asia, and how we mean to achieve our ends.

On these crucial points the only sure evidence is the record of experience.

We have had commercial and political relations with the Orient since the earliest days of American independence. A vessel, called the Empress of China, left New York for Canton in 1784, and on its return, Major Samuel Shaw of Boston, was, on Secretary John Jay's recommendation, made consul at Canton. Our relations with Japan cover the 90 years since the visit of Commodore Perry. In this long relationship there has been only one short period—at the beginning of this century—when, having conquered the Philippines, the United States displayed the symptoms of imperialistic ambition.

The ambition, however, had no roots in American sentiment and no foundation in American interest, and very quickly it evaporated. This short imperialistic interlude and what has followed have made it very clear indeed that the controlling American purpose in the Far East is trade and cultural intercourse, and that to achieve this purpose we rely on two things: primarily, upon the desire of the peoples of Asia to be independent, and second, upon using our own force to support them in resisting conquest and dismemberment. We have regarded our own profit as dependent upon equality of trade, and our own security as closely bound up with the independence and security of the Asiatic peoples.

Natural Allies

In so far as we have failed in the East, it has not been in extending our power in Asia but in not taking sufficient trouble to be strong enough to give quick and decisive assistance to our natural allies. For all Asiatic peoples—the Koreans, the Chinese, the Filipinos, the Indians—when they resist conquest and dismemberment—are the natural allies of the United States. Our security in the Pacific and their independence in Asia are the two sides of the same shield, and this fact, more than any declarations we sign with them, is the basic community of our aims.

The acid test has been applied—persuasively, we believe, in the Philippines, and conclusively in China. In the long negotiations which preceded Pearl Harbor we were offered not merely peace with Japan but even a junior partnership with Japan—provided we would connive at the conquest of China. We are at war with Japan because we rejected this proposal. Let us be very candid because candor is better than fine rhetoric. We rejected the Japanese proposals not as crusaders for the freedom of the world, not only because there is in America great affection and deep admiration for the Chinese, but fundamentally because the independence of China is vital to the security of the United States. The Chinese, who are wise with the experience of centuries of civilized life, will recognize that such an alliance founded upon vital interest is infinitely more enduring and reliable than one founded upon sentiment or expediency. For in such an alliance as we have with the Chinese, each wants from the other only what each wants for itself—that is to say, its own national independence and national security.

"It is on this basis, with the Chinese as our witnesses and underwriters, that we can perhaps hope to approach the people of India, and help them to believe that their independence is in fact—regardless of the difficulty of finding formulae — indissolubly bound up with the cause of the United Nations.

Candor Best Argument

Here again candor is the best argument, and so it should be said that in the last two years gradually, in the last four months very rapidly, there has taken place a mighty change within the English-speaking world, and a mighty change also between West and East. The change is irreversible. The defeat of our enemies will confirm the change and mark the beginning of a new order of things, not the restoration of the old. What has happened—and it is one of the supreme events of modern history—is the growing union in the West of the English-speaking democracies and of their Allies in Europe, and in the East the certain liquidation of Western imperialism. MacArthur in Australia, Cripps in India, Casey in Cairo, Churchill and Roosevelt in London and Washington, are the sym-

Religious Castes and Sects of India

Hindus Form Largest Group With Total of Nearly 250 Millions.

As background material for reference, the British Press Service issues this brief summary giving the elementary facts about the main religions of India, since religion is of much deeper concern to the mass of Indian people than is politics, about which most of the millions of this sub-continent are quite apathetic.

The Hindus. This is by far the largest religious community in India, totalling nearly 250 million of the population. Originally, Hinduism, one of the world's oldest faiths, had only four castes—the Brahmin (priest), the Kshatriya (soldier), the Vaisya (merchant), and the Sudra (laborer). But after the course of centuries the main castes and sub-castes now number nearly 3,000, the strictly orthodox members of which cannot intermarry or even eat with one another. But most numerous are the depressed classes, who are without caste, the untouchables who total 60 million and are not permitted to engage in any but the lowliest tasks, such as work in the leather tanneries, removal of garbage, etc. and whose very shadows must not fall on the food of caste Hindus. In Madras these untouchables are numerous enough to be the most powerful group in the political life of the province.

For the Hindu, his lot is fixed by birth. He may not rise from a lower caste to a higher, but may look forward to being reborn in a higher caste as a reward for good deeds in his present life.

There are millions of Hindu gods, all regarded as different manifestations of the Divine Spirit. Some of the Hindu sects, such as the Sikhs, are racial groups with their own special rites and variations of belief. There is even one sect called the Nikkel Sen, which reveres the spirit of the British 19th century General Nicholson, whose bravery and martial skill is considered to have been more than mortal.

The Moslems, second largest religious community in India, embracing about 80 million persons, form the majorities of the population in the British Indian Provinces of Bengal, Northwest Frontier, Punjab and Sind, as well as in several of the Indian states ruled by Indian princes. There are also large minorities of the Moslems in practically every other province and state. Their fearlessness as fighters is attributed largely to their belief in Kismet—or fate—the doctrine that every event has been predestined by God. From this belief it is argued that if one is destined to die, then holding back from battle will be of no avail.

The Moslems claim that their religion, Islam, is most democratic, with no distinctions of race or caste.

The Buddhists include only about 400,000 people in India, most of them in Bengal. This religion is a breakaway from Hinduism and its founder, Gautama Buddha, was probably the first to preach the good American and British democratic doctrine that "all men are equal." Buddhism thereby rejects the Hindu idea of caste.

The Jains, who number about one and one-quarter million, are closely akin to the Hindus. In fact, Brahmin priests frequently officiate at their ceremonies. They are largely of the Bunnia (trading) class, and are to be found chiefly in Bombay. They are the most extreme of vegetarians, even picking their way carefully along a road to avoid treading on insects.

The Parsis. This comparatively small group of 110,000 Indians, usually found in such cities as Poona, Bombay and Karachi, are, as their name suggests, descendents of Persian immigrants. Theirs is the religion of Zorostor and they are commonly but erroneously thought to be sun worshippers. Sun and fire are merely the visible emblems of their Supreme God, who has neither face, form, color or shape, being beyond the comprehension of mortal man. The Parsis are mostly engaged in business or the learned professions, rarely in agriculture. There are many of them serving as medical officers in the Indian Army.

The Parsis are the entrepreneurs of business enterprise. The Tata family, for example, are Parsis. They founded the great Tata Iron and Steel company which owns the largest single plant of any kind in the British Empire. The Parsis are largely responsible for the fact that India is the 7th industrial nation in the world. Hence their importance to the country is far greater than their small number would suggest.

The Sikhs, of which there are around 4½ millions, are also a sect of Hinduism. Most of them live in the Punjab, Sind and the Northwest Frontier Province. There are several sub-sects within their sect.

The Singhs (Lions), a sect of soldiers, are famous for their proud martial spirit. Nearly every Singh Sikh is the son of a Singh, but no man is born a Singh. He must be initiated into the faith with the special rites and ceremonies of their sect. Other Sikh sects or castes are the Jats and the Mazbis.

All Sikhs are fighting men, with a love of military life and

Monograms

By DAMON RUNYON

Will Someone Explain To Us Wife Puts Her Initials on Stu[d] Instead of Mate's?

LOS ANGELES—In the course of a long checkered career, we have visited private homes in various parts of the U[nited] States. We have noticed that in many of homes the table linen, table silver, and sometimes the china and glassware is monogram That is to say, it bears initials worked o[n] neat designs.

Sometimes, we have had occasoin to the bathrooms and bedrooms of these and have observed that the towels—face bath—and the bed linen is similarly init[ialed]. Not infrequently we have seen initials on ture frames and ash trays and lighters even on some of the furniture.

We do not mention this circumstance in ical mood toward the initialing itself. A gram may be decorative as well as usef[ul] evidence of ownership. But what we are t[rying] to figure out, being in one of our darkly br[ood]ing spells, is why the initials are inva[ri]ably those of the lady of the house and never gentleman.

As we understand it, when a lady and tleman set up housekeeping under co[n]jonal auspices, it is a partnership propo[si]tion 50-50 even-Steven, share-and-share alike [a]ll his is hers and vice versa. But always dame comes up with her initials on the [s]ilver, with the small concession to him of letter.

FOR example, in her maiden name is Fra[n]ces Sarah Tuggs and his is Robert Jasper [D]iffingham, the linen, etc., is initialed F. S[.] not R. J. D., though he pays for the stuff [a]nd is legally the head of the home. There is no argument as to his status—theoretically he is the boss and should be consulted on all m[at]ters of the house.

Moreover, the wife is commonly given the use of his name in its entirety as her o[wn]. Mrs. Robert Jasper Diffingham—when sign[ing] up bills, or registering at hotels. By right, then, does she tacitly appropriate to herself the silverware and the bath towels, especially the bath towels. Should she not, in all fairness, put the poor guy's initials on something?

We were discussing this matter the other evening with Rufus Lemaire, the former Br[oad]way theatrical producer who has been out here for some years in the movie industry. He tells us that it was something that had been rankling in his own bosom a long time. He pointed out that all the dolls are in cahoots on the deal from the moment an engagement to marry is proclaimed, because the presents sent the bride are always marked with her own initials.

RUFUS said he thought it might be that the lady always had the idea in the back of her mind that maybe the marriage might not turn out good and that in case of a split up, the initials somehow established her claim to possession of the stuff. He said it was more likely that a lady even contemplated the possibility of a second marriage in which case a little expert needlework could convert the original of the original monogram into another letter. This seemed to be mighty sound reasoning.

We never heard of a lady asking her husband's permission to spread her initials over the household paraphernalia. We imagine most husbands would give the permission gladly, especially in the first transports of matrimonial happiness and before they had time to reflect or consider the selfish import of the matter, but the lady never asks. She just goes ahead and has it done.

If we were advising a young gentleman about marriage, we would have to tell him that he ought to have a conference with the object of his affections prior to the wedding of the happy day and reach an understanding with her that if anything was to be initialed, his brand would come first. Then if he happened to be one of those husbands who cannot readily recall his wife's maiden name, he would not always have the feeling on entering the bathroom that he was in a strange house.

TEN YEARS AGO.

It was Thursday, April 7, 1932.

Capt. Frank M. Hawks, famous aviator, holder of several transcontinental records, was injured when his plane crashed into a stone wall as he was attempting a takeoff from the Worcester, Mass., airport.

The condition of Hoke Donithen, Marion attorney who on Wednesday underwent a major operation in Grant hospital, Columbus, was pronounced as good by Dr. T. H. Sutherland, who assisted Dr. Luke Zartman of Columbus in the operation.

Forty-five members of the Woman's club of Russells Point spent the day in Marion and in the afternoon were entertained at cards and tea by Mrs. J. E. Thomas of Wilson avenue.

Safety Director Emery M. Murphy announced that an effort to eliminate roller skating on the streets was to be made by providing a place where boys and girls could skate in safety. Permission had been obtained from the county commissioners to close off the south side of the boulevard leading from Delaware avenue to Vernon Heights north of the Harding memorial for skating each day from 4 to 9 p. m.

Cecil R. Leavens was installed as exalted ruler of Marion lodge of Elks with R. E. Prettyman as installing officer.

Mrs. Roy Wise was hostess to the T. A. T. club at her home on South Grand avenue.

Don't Like White Men

By GEORGE MACKIE

NEW HAVEN, Conn., April 7—(Wide W[orld]—"Anafa white man. Yu yawa anafa fig[ht] lokuta."

That, in the opinion of John W. M. Wh[iting] Yale scholar, is what a Papuan native of Guinea would say if you asked him wh[at] thought of the Japanese invasion of his [is]

It means: "I do not like the white man I fight him, and take his head."

Whiting, who lived nearly a year w[ith] remote New Guinea tribe and almost wen[t] a head-hunting foray, hastens to explain the Papuan in his reference to "white m[en] probably wouldn't differentiate between a J[ap]anese invader or the nominal Dutch or Australian masters of the island.

The natives don't like anybody, Whiting and apparently, in the struggle for New G[uinea] will side with whomever gets to them firs[t] the best promises.

"They will favor anybody who will [give] them to get heads or cannibalistic victi[ms]" says Whiting.

The Australians, who have held part of island since it was mandated to them [by] Germany following World war I, and the D[utch] who control the rest of it have made [head] hunting and cannibalism a capital offense, [are] to the annoyance of the natives.

Now, Whiting points out, the United Nat[ions] defenders could declare an open season Japanese heads, but, at the same time, the J[ap]anese could incite the natives to go after heads of their erstwhile masters, and Papuans would be nothing loath because [most] of them who know anything about the w[hite] men feel they have been treated badly.

What help the natives could give a defen[sive] or invading force is questionable and lies m[ainly] in their strength of numbers.

"They're a cowardly people," says Whi[ting] "and when they are after heads or cannibal[istic] victims they always get together in a big [war] and attack some outnumbered village at d[awn]. Their only weapons are bows and bamboo [tipped] arrows and hard wood spears."

Whiting doesn't envy the Japanese in t[he] reported attempt to push overland from S[a]maua to Port Moresby. It's no more than [150] or 200 miles, but jungles that can be trave[led] only by hacking a path and a mountain r[ange] of 4,000 to 5,000 feet elevation lie in the [way], not to mention any natives who might sudd[enly] acquire a liking for Japanese heads.

Improving Lifeboats

A plan for providing additional means of clinging to overturned lifeboats has been [sent] to every sea-going ship by the Ministry of [War] Transport. The arrangement consists of a [num]ber of grab lines passed under the bottom of the boat from gunwale to gunwale, knotted at intervals to form hand grips, and with loops [under] the keel for the support of the arms.—Lon[don] Times.

FERGUSON LAUNCHES DRIVE FOR OFFICE

Auditor Charges Bricker Lags In War Effort.

By The Associated Press

COLUMBUS, O., April 7—Joseph T. Ferguson, Ohio's auditor, coupled his formal declaration of candidacy for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination with an accusation that Republican Gov. John W. Bricker has lagged in America's war drive.

In his announcement address at Barberton last night, Ferguson asked a local party rally if it was advisable to allow "Roosevelt-haters to carry the responsibility of government when they would rather see this nation lose the war than to see Roosevelt win peace and our battle for the rights of the common man."

"It took the shedding of young American blood at Pearl Harbor to awaken those Republican congressmen, and also the Tafts, Burtons and Brickers, from their outrageous slumber," he said.

"And judging from their official actions now, some of their visions are not yet clear as to the tremendous job ahead for all Americans."

(Besides Bricker, he referred to Republican Senators Robert A. Taft of Cincinnati and Harold H. Burton of Cleveland.)

Bricker, who is seeking reelection to a third term, also was assailed for not calling a special legislature to provide state money for home defense work.

Cuyahoga Commissioner To Back McSweeney

By The Associated Press

CLEVELAND, April 7—County Commissioner James A. Reynolds said today he would support former Congressman John McSweeney of Wooster as a Democratic candidate for the gubernatorial nomination "the moment he declares he is a candidate, since he is by all odds the best man the Democrats have to offer this year."

McSweeney recently resigned his post with the United States treasury as Ohio representative for the sale of war savings bonds and stamps. He made no announcement of any candidacy, however.

War Council Meets

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, April 7—The Pacific war council scheduled its second meeting at the White House today but with no advance indications of what phases of the conflict would be of greatest concern. The council is made up of representatives of the seven nations fighting Japan in the Pacific theater.

The government of Iraq has made importation of motion picture producing apparatus subject to license and has established a censorship over the exhibition, production and exportation of films.

ILLNESS IS FATAL TO THOMAS O. JOHNSTON

Funeral To Be in Green Camp Church Thursday.

Thomas Orval Johnston, 56, of a half mile east of Green Camp on the Marion road, died today at 4:45 a. m. in White Cross hospital in Columbus. Ill for the last three years, he had recently suffered a series of heart attacks. Early this morning he was moved to the hospital and a few hours later the fatal attack occurred.

Mr. Johnston was born on the farm where he lived on Jan. 19, 1886 to Rezin W. Johnston, a native of Marion county, and Violetta Thomas Johnston, a native of Van Wert. His marriage to Miss Nora B. Savidge took place on June 16, 1912.

Surviving with the widow are three daughters, Marilyn, at home, Mrs. Cleta Price of Columbus and Miss Joan Johnston of East Liberty; two sisters, Mrs. W. Irl Reasoner of South Vine street and Mrs. M. E. Baldwin of East Washington avenue, and one brother, W. W. Johnston of Girard avenue.

Mr. Johnston was a member of the Green Camp Baptist church and of the Knights of Pythias lodge of Green Camp.

The funeral will be conducted Thursday at 2:30 p. m. in the Baptist church at Green Camp by Rev. C. W. Harmon. Burial will be in Marion cemetery. Friends may call at the Merle H. Hughes funeral home on Mt. Vernon avenue after 7:30 tonight and at the church after 12 noon Thursday.

KNOX REPORTS LAG IN U-BOAT ATTACKS

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, April 7—Secretary of the Navy Knox reported today that German U-boat attacks on shipping along the United States Atlantic coast had dropped off considerably last week and that the drop might be due to protective methods recently enforced by the navy.

Discussing the submarine situation at a press conference, Knox said that the navy's experience with U-boat raiders throughout the North Atlantic had shown that they operate in waves.

"In preparing your stories," he told reporters, "it will be necessary to keep that fact in mind because that may be responsible for the decline in coastal attacks last week. On the other hand the drop may be due to methods newly adopted."

38 GROCERS VIOLATE SURPLUS STAMP PLAN

By The Associated Press

NEW PHILADELPHIA, O., April 7—Harold Clifford, area supervisor of the federal surplus marketing administration, announced today that 38 Columbiana county grocers had violated the administration's regulations by selling non-food or non-surplus agricultural products.

Clifford, in charge of the area comprising Columbiana, Tuscarawas, Carroll, and Jefferson counties, said surplus marketing agents in their first area investigation found the grocers were either selling to "persons eligible for public assistance" groceries other than food, or were accepting blue surplus stamps for food products not on the surplus list.

He said it was one of the first of such investigations held in the state.

Clifford said the marketing administration, as in the case of the 38 Columbiana county grocers, would not redeem any commodity stamps that storekeepers had accepted illegally. He said the offenses were not criminal and no fines would be made, although grocers would have to stand the loss on unredeemed stamps.

The area supervisor said the surplus marketing program, which was intended to provide correct nutrition diets to low-income families, would suffer if grocers did not support it.

Union Slowdown Closes Mt. Vernon War Plant

By The Associated Press

MT. VERNON, O., April 7—A slowdown that cut production on war goods 50 per cent caused closing of the Shellmar products Co., General Manager Paul M. Gilfillan reported today.

The plant, employing 500 persons, made airplane engine covers and other military articles.

Gilfillan accused the CIO United Toy, Novelty and Paper Makers' union of breaking a contract by refusing to arbitrate a wage dispute and ignoring pleas of the U. S. labor conciliation board to resume full production.

Harry Scott, president of the local union, had no comment immediately. Plant officials said the slowdown began April 2.

No details of the wage dispute or present scales were announced.

PLANS MADE FOR COOKING SCHOOL

Farm Bureau-Sponsored Sessions Set for Thursday.

Miss Jeanne Montgomery and Miss Jean Dawson, home economic instructors at Ohio State university, will give demonstrations using lard and deep-fat frying in place of butter at the Marion County Farm bureau cooking school which will be held Thursday in Masonic Temple auditorium.

Two sessions, one at 1 p. m. and the other at 8:30 p. m., are open to the public. A family session cooperative talk will feature the evening session. No admission will be charged.

The school, under the supervision of Miss Daisy Davis, also an instructor in home economics at Ohio State university, is sponsored jointly by the national live stock and meat boards.

Talks will be given by Mrs. Ruth Arnold Steva, a teacher on consumer cooperation, and by L. J. Bennett, coordinating director of the Ohio farm bureau.

Music will be in charge of Billy Johnson. Refreshments will be served.

MINISTERS DISCUSS WAR PLANT PROBLEMS

Pledge Support to City in Meeting Difficulties.

The Marion County Ministerial association will give its full support to the city government in meeting problems which may arise from the population increase due to the Scioto Ordnance Plant and also will urge persons in the churches and outside the churches to support the government's collecting of scrap and waste materials.

Problems which the new plant may bring to the city were discussed at length, particularly those of a moral aspect, at a monthly meeting yesterday in the Y. M. C. A. A formal resolution of support to the city government will be acted on at a later meeting.

Citizen - participation in the civilian defense program also was urged by the association.

Rev. E. M. Hertzler of First Church of the Brethren, president of the association, made an appeal for an adequate church program to meet the city's fast-growing population and suggested that the association work in conjunction with the social work program of the Y. M. C. A.

Gypsy Smith, nationally famous evangelist, has indicated that he will be free to come to Marion for a campaign either late this spring or early in the fall. The association will make plans for a citywide campaign.

Relaxing of Auto Restrictions Foreseen

By The Associated Press

PITTSBURGH, April 7—Ray Chamberlain, executive vice president of the National Automobile Dealers association, predicted yesterday the government soon will relax rationing of new passenger automobiles.

"I have the word of Rolf Nugent, chief of the auto rationing section, office of price administration, the present passenger auto rationing regulations will be liberalized within the next few days," Chamberlin told a joint meeting of Allegheny county auto dealers and rationing board members.

Jones Denies U. S. Delays Synthetic Rubber Plans

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, April 7—Secretary of Commerce Jones asserted today that there had been no delay in development of synthetic rubber by the government, adding that there were now engagements for domestic manufacturing facilities sufficient to produce more than 700,000 tons of synthetic rubber annually.

Testifying before the senate defense investigating committee, Jones said that this rate of production could be readily increased if necessary but declared that "even with this production, civilians must conserve tires and rubber in order to meet our military needs."

Japs Aim Bombs To Drive India Against British

By DEWITT MacKENZIE
Wide World War Analyst

The Japanese bombing of Ceylon and cities on the Madras coast of India may or may not be preliminary to an attempt at invasion, but it patently does represent (1) an effort to disrupt strategic British supply stations, and (2) terrorism which is calculated to drive the Indians into rejecting Britain's offer of dominion status and refusing to support the war effort.

Coincident with this reign of bombs, Japanese Premier Tojo has announced his country's intention to invade. He has in effect warned the people of Hindustan to desert the British and join the Nipponese, lest "India suffer great calamities." Perhaps he spoke the truth. Invasion certainly is possible, but the fact that he is advertising his plans in advance is no recommendation for confidence.

You have seen the Japs at circuses spin barrels on their feet. Well, it strikes me that Tojo at the moment is lying on his back and doing some psychological barrel-spinning for its effect on the Anglo-Indian dispute.

Whether India is susceptible to this jugglery remains to be seen. As might be expected, the immediate reaction of the Indian press was the reverse of what Tojo wanted. The newspapers urged the two parties settle differences and get together for defense.

That would seem to be sound advice since an India divided against itself is an invitation for invasion. In addition, there is small doubt that Herr Hitler is urging the Japs to take the offensive either against India or Russia as a support to the German spring drive against the Bolshevists.

An attack on Siberia would compel the Russians to fight on two fronts at once. An invasion of India would force the British to withdraw troops and equipment from Irak and Iran for use in Hindustan, leaving unguarded the gateway to the Middle East for the Nazis.

The Russian show would be attractive to the Japs. They know they must fight the Soviet sooner or later anyway. They long have coveted the rich Amur basin. And the Russian forces in the Vladivostok area have been Japan's greatest worry. The Nipponese are particularly fearful of the Red airforce there, since it is near enough that its bombers could play havoc with the flimsily built cities of the island empire.

OHIO FALLS BEHIND ON MILK PRODUCTION

By The Associated Press

COLUMBUS, O., April 7—Ohio is falling behind its wartime quota for milk products under the lease-lend program because of declining prices paid dairymen, C. G. McBride, chairman for opening sessions of the fifth annual milk marketing conference here, asserted today.

McBride, agricultural economist at Ohio State university, said the problem of filling Ohio's quota would receive major consideration by delegates to the two-day conference opening tomorrow.

He said farmers currently are receiving about 35 cents a hundred pounds less than five or six weeks ago for milk used by evaporation plants and cheese makers. Lease-lend cheese prices have dropped about 1½ cents a pound, causing added concern to milk producers, he added.

KILLS WIFE AFTER MOTHER'S FUNERAL

LORAIN, O., April 7—Murder charges will be filed against Andrew Doinoff, 36—year-old South Lorain steelworker, in the fatal stabbing of his wife Anna, 26, if he recovers from self-inflicted wounds administered with a butcher knife, police said today.

Edward Sherman, 60, former city councilman and friend of the family, said he and several others went to the Doinoff home after funeral services for the steel worker's mother, Mrs. Katherine Doinoff, 57.

Hearing a scream from the kitchen, he rushed out to find Doinoff attacking his wife with the butcher knife, Sherman told Sergeant Britta Buda. "I rushed at him and threw him into the corner and ran out to call police and an ambulance," Sherman related.

When the police arrived with Sherman, Doinoff was found unconscious and bleeding from knife wounds. Nicholas Doinoff told police he saw his brother stab himself.

Doinoff's two daughters by a previous marriage told detectives their father had been very jealous and had accused his wife of associating with other men.

Police Inspector John A. Meister said murder charges would be filed if Doinoff recovers.

DEMOCRATS HEAR BROOKS FLETCHER

Former Congressman Speaks at Party Club Meeting.

Brooks Fletcher, former congressman from the Eighth district, spoke at a meeting of the Marion County Democratic club Monday night in party headquarters.

Mr. Fletcher compared Japan, Germany and the United States with regard to their educational systems. He said that while youths in this country are taught to love their fellowmen, German and Japanese youths are taught to worship might.

Moreover, he asserted that, even after Germany and Japan were conquered it would be difficult to eliminate attitudes from the minds of people who have been taught since birth to believe the opposite of what Americans are taught to believe.

Other speakers were R. M. Winegardner, candidate for Ohio lieutenant governor, and Kenneth Petri of Galion, former candidate for congressman from the Eighth district.

Mr. Winegardner, who is now practicing law in Washington C. H., traced what he termed the "divine leadership" of our presidents in times of crisis, from Washington and Lincoln through President Roosevelt.

Mr. Petri, a Galion attorney, spoke briefly on democratic principles.

Announcement was made that a meeting of the ladies' division of the Marion County Democratic club will be held next Monday in party headquarters.

RENT CONTROL PLAN FAILS AT DAYTON

By The Associated Press

DAYTON, O., April 7 — The city of Dayton wrote off as a failure today its effort to control rents for the growing population manning its war industries.

Fred Van Allen, chairman of a six-month-old Dayton fair rent committee organized to arbitrate between tenants and landlords, recommended calling in a federal administrator to establish ceilings and to declare the city a defense rental area. Sixty days after notice of such a classification, rents would be frozen at some "fair rent date."

The 15-member committee issued a statement declaring only about ten per cent of the landlords had increased rents unjustly, but that tenants were unwilling to risk eviction and possible inability to find other quarters by filing formal complaints.

Van Allen said that 76 persons consulted with the committee during the past two weeks, but only two were willing to file formal charges.

He added that the group's biweekly meetings were causing resentment and that it must "acknowledge defeat."

With the city's population unofficially reported to be 20 per cent above normal as a result of the war program, Chamber of Commerce officials estimated the average rental had risen ten per cent overall. The rent committee said that complainants with whom it had dealt had reported 30 per cent increases in the past year.

CONGRESSMAN SMITH SPEAKS AT GALION

Marion Man Deals with War Effort in Talk.

Special to The Star

GALION, April 7—Congressman Frederick C. Smith of Marion, spoke to more than 100 people Monday when the Republican club held an open meeting in Hotel Talbott. Dr. Smith spoke on the seriousness of the war and dealt with problems which he said are hindering war production and progress.

He charged that "bureaucratic organizations and other forces operating through corrupt union labor leadership are the main bottlenecks in stepping up war production." Dr. Smith said, "selfish, self-seeking organizations principally concerned with the advancement of their own interests are hindering our war effort. More 'worry-birds' are needed in congress to watch expenditures."

He said appropriations are handled through bureaucrats and too many congressmen have nothing to say about the matters.

In touching upon what he named as the second bottleneck in the war efforts Dr. Smith mentioned "tributes" and fees extracted from workers in defense for the so-called privilege of working in certain defense industries.

In closing he reiterated his conviction that Washington is still not aware of the seriousness of this war. He said he was inclined to believe that the public is even more aware than in Washington.

In advising the public as to what they could do to help in the war effort, Dr. Smith noted that waste is a capital sin and saving is of utmost importance. He warned the public to support measures to reduce non-defense and non-essential production. Primarily, he said, give to Uncle Sam rather than try to get something from him.

DELAWARE WORKERS' BUS MAKES FIRST TRIP FREE

Legality of Program To Be Decided by Commission.

Special to The Star

DELAWARE, O., April 7 — A Delaware war workers bus to Columbus made its first trip yesterday but it was a free ride.

Charles Shively of Delaware, who plans to run two buses to Columbus every eight hours, isn't charging fares until he clears up the legality of his service with the public utilities commission.

It is understood that some objections to the war workers' buses have been lodged with the commission. A bus line now holds a franchise for bus service to Columbus.

On the ruling of the commission will hinge the fate of the Shively-operated bus service.

FARM GROUP'S YEAR ENDS WITH FISH FRY

Pleasant Twp. Young Farmers Give Annual Dinner.

The annual fish fry for members of the Pleasant Township Young Farmers association was held last night in the Pleasant school cafeteria. The dinner, arranged by a committee composed of Lawrence Weiss, Denver Holliday and Paul Somerlot, was prepared by wives of members of the association. After dinner tables were filled for cards.

Present were Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Lauchler, Mr. and Mrs. George Last, Mr. and Mrs. Weldon Dutt, Mr. and Mrs. Delbert Lichtenberger, Mr. and Mrs. Earl Mehaffey, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Zeis, Mr. and Mrs. Milford Schmidt, Mr. and Mrs. George Last, Mr. and Mrs. E. F. Banning, George Barks, Denver Holliday, George Young, Vernon Goyer, LeRoy Lauchler, John E. Seiter, Joe Mehaffey, Lawrence Weiss, Warren Cline, Carl Buseler, Harvey Fetter, Donald Mauts, Paul Somerlot, George Leffler, Miss June Fireman, Miss Emma Leffler and Miss Mary Mehaffey.

The meeting marked the close of a series of weekly educational meetings begun last October. Two courses of study were followed, "Increasing Production of Animal Products for the Present Emergency" and "Farm Machinery Repairs."

The association is composed of young men who have completed their school work and are following a study of problems relating to the farm. The program is a part of the vocational agricultural program in schools having a vocational agricultural department.

Action Taken by Commission Assures Full Summer Softball Progra

Pres. O'Connell Promises Continuance of Sport at Spring Banquet; 15 Teams Already Signed.

"There definitely will be softball this summer," said Robert E. O'Connell, president of the Marion Softball commission, at the annual spring banquet of the commission last night at the Y. M. C. A.

He said 15 teams already have expressed a desire to participate. However, he remarked, he does not know just what organization of teams will be made. Pending further entries, no leagues have as yet been set up.

He announced that no deadline for the submission of entry blanks has been set. He pointed out, however, that they should be submitted within the next three weeks, as playing probably will start some time after the second week of May. He said, because of the added hour of daylight, starting time for games may be 6:30 or even 6:45. The usual fee of $15 must accompany each entry, he added.

Four commissioners, two new members and two already serving on the commission, were elected last night.

Elected were Harry "Hosey" Williams, Elmer Shaw, Ray Donaugh and Guy Stoner. Stoner and Donaugh are new members of the commission and Williams and Shaw were both reelected. Elections are effective immediately. The two retiring members of the commission are William R. Martin and William Fabian.

The commission is composed of 12 members, four of whom must be elected every three years.

Each team entered in one of the four leagues operated last season was eligible to cast one or two votes, depending on whether they had one or two representatives at the meeting.

Those elected were chosen from a group of nominees which also included William Fabian, R. G. Scott, Leo Keller and Kenneth Fields.

All nominations were made by the nominating committee. Nominations from the floor, opened by Bob O'Connell, president of the commission, were closed by a motion by John Clark, a commission member.

O'Connell pointed out that a major problem facing the commission this year is the acquiring of umpires to officiate at games. Heretofore, the commission has provided an umpire for each of four contests played Monday through Friday. However, Mr. O'Connell said many who have umpired in the past probably will be unwilling or unable to officiate this season because of the tire shortage. He said the only solution now under consideration by the commission is to select some fan attending the game to act as umpire. This, he pointed out, would eliminate the fee previously charged each team for umpire service.

A query concerning the eligibility of a member of a fraternal organization in another town who moves to Marion to play on a club team here was answered in the affirmative.

However, the rule that a player may not participate in both commercial and industrial leagues will hold, according to President O'Connell. He added that a player may play in either commercial or industrial league and still be eligible for participation in either Sunday school league.

Mr. Hinklin took the floor to explain that the reason for this rule is to prevent the splitting up of opposing teams in the "Little World series," at the close of the season. If several players are participants on teams which meet in the series many difficulties arise.

Another decision made at the banquet was a ruling that players who had been taking part in one Sunday school league could change to the other Sunday school league.

Mr. O'Connell stated that the Sunday school league regulations will remain the same. He said some changes may be made in industrial league rules. He specified that a regulation which does not permit any one living outside of town to participate in games may be changed to allow factory

PROSPECT THINCLADS TRIP BROWN, WALDO IN TRIANGULAR MEET

Johnson Clears 120-Yard Hurdles in 16 Seconds as Prospect Scores 95 Points.

PROSPECT, April 7—Prospect High school trackmen took top honors in the triangular Prospect-Waldo-Harpster track meet here yesterday with a total of 95 points. Harpster came in second with 62 1/3 and Waldo trailed with 31 2/3.

The victory marked the thirty-ninth straight win for the Prospect trackmen. They will go after their fortieth tomorrow when they entertain the Morral and Brown township teams. Prospect has eight straight county titles to its credit.

There was a six-way tie for first place in the high jump at five feet with Temple, Gast and Issler for Prospect, Shaeffer and Sigler for Harpster and Conklin for Waldo sharing equally.

In the pole vault a two-way tie for second place resulted with Wolf of Prospect and Mills of Harpster placing. For fifth place in the same event there was a six-way tie between C. Schorr, Wilson and Gast of Prospect and Murphy, Lawson and Shaeffer of Harpster.

Prospect excelled in the field events while Harpster took the majority of the running honors. However Everett Johnson, co-captain of the Prospect team, ran the low hurdles in 16 seconds to chalk up one of the fastest races ever run in Marion county for the distance.

Miley was Waldo's best man, taking third place in the 100-

BRADLEY'S BLESS ME AFTER DERBY TITLE

Veteran Horseman Seeks 5th Win May 2.

By The Associated Press

LEXINGTON, Ky.—You have heard this before, but it bears repeating with the 1942 Kentucky Derby less than a month off.

"Watch out for Bradley!"

Col. E. R. Bradley, whose name seems almost inevitable to figure in Derby forecasts, is aiming at his fifth triumph in the Churchill Downs classic this year with a black colt named Bless Me.

Bless Me recently arrived at Bradley's Idle Hour farm near here from Florida to get in shape for the Keeneland spring meeting and, of course, for the big race May 2 at Louisville.

The knowing ones here in the Bluegrass, aware of Bless Me's high standing in the Derby winter book, have been out to look him over and declare they are favorably impressed—mighty favorably impressed.

Bless Me didn't win any stake races last year, but he made an unforgetable showing in the Walden handicap at Pimlico when the mighty Alsab just managed to beat him by a head. There is general agreement that Bless Me would have won the Walden if his rider had taken him to the rail.

The Bradley candidate didn't start last year until the Saratoga meeting, but in six starts he won four and was second twice.

Down in Florida, while he was being pointed out for the Flamingo Stakes, he pulled up lame after a workout, but his handlers say that trouble now has been eliminated.

Will Hurley, his trainer, still is in Florida and out at Idle Hour they aren't certain what plans Hurley has for Bless Me, but they think the colt is sure to compete in Keeneland's Bluegrass Stakes, one of the final previous of Derby prospects.

INDIAN MOUNDSMEN TO GO FULL ROUTE

Bagley Goes Nine Innings in Win Over Giants.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., April 7—The Cleveland Indians, with an eye to the calendar, are beginning to give their pitchers a nine-inning chore.

Mel Harder, the probable starter in the first game at Cleveland Stadium against the White Sox a week from Friday, was sent to the mound today against the Giants. The New Yorkers chose two hurlers—Carl Hubbell and Bob Carpenter, whose combined efforts were good for one of their team's two victories over Cleveland.

Jim Bagby went the whole route yesterday at Greenville, Miss., and though the Giants hammered him for 12 hits, he pulled through with Cleveland's seventh win in nine Grapefruit circuit encounters with the national leaguers. Either Bagby or Al Milnar will face the Detroit Tigers in the season opener at Detroit next Tuesday.

The first of the Cleveland pitching staff to stay for more than seven innings, Bagby shut out the opposition for five innings, and then allowed them nine hits in the last four frames.

The Tribe, meanwhile, garnered only six safe blows, but four of them, including two homers, were bunched in the fourth inning.

All of the Indians' runs came in this stanza. After Ken Keltner had doubled and Jeff Heath had walked, Oscar Grimes' single brought in the first run. Grimes was playing first in place of Les Fleming for the day. Manager Lou Boudreau then slammed a homer over the left field wall. Ray Mack won a pass and Jim Hegan put a homer in the same spot.

Training Camp News

By The Associated Press

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — Manager Bill McKechnie says his Cincinnati Reds are all set everywhere but in center field and he declares he is not worried about conditions there. "I'm going to keep alternating Harry Craft and Mike McCormick until I see enough to convince me one way or the other," says the Deacon.

NORFOLK, Va.—The Brooklyn Dodgers got no cheering news from the hospital where First Baseman Dolph Camilli and Second Baseman Billy Herman are patients. After preliminary examinations the medico said he could not promise that either player would be in the opening lineup next Tuesday.

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla.—Stan Musial joined the St. Louis Cardinals late last season and immediately became the toast of the National league with his hitting. Right now, however, Harry Walker has as good a chance to be the club's right fielder as does Musial. Walker, up from Columbus, has hit at a .400 clip this spring while Musial is near the .200 mark.

12 Harding Youths Award Varsity Basketball Lette

Coach Dewey N. Bohyer Presents 12 Jayvee Grams; Former School Janitor Honored.

Running down the curtain on the 1941-1942 Harding High basketball season, Head Coach Dewey N. Bohyer presented awards to 12 youths, including six seniors, and junior varsity to 12 athletes last night during the high school recognition held in the recently-completed home economics dining room ing.

Those receiving varsity monograms were Acting Capt. Charlie Roberts, Day Hurst, Gene Shellhorn, Dick Mulvaine, Dick Cleary, Keith Williams, Chuck Bowers, Bill Stein, and Harold Garver. Manager letters were awarded Phillip Shockney and Harold Walker. Ruth Wise, Ethel Granger, Eileen Roberts, and Harold Mouser received cheer leader letters.

Custodian Honored

John Caldwell, veteran custodian of Harding High school who retired recently after serving 22 years, was unable to attend the banquet. He was voted a lifetime membership in the Varsity "H" club. Mr. Caldwell was a staunch Harding booster throughout his long period of service and was especially interested in athletics, having had one son who played football at Harding several years ago.

Present for the banquet were more than 40 players, faculty members, school board members, and guests. Guests were seated at tables before individual place cards inscribed "N. C. O. Co-Champs." Last year for the second straight season the Harding team captured a co-championship in the North Central Ohio conference. Ashland, by virtue of a season-ending victory over Harding, claimed a share of the crown.

Speakers included Coach Bohyer, Assistant Coach William O. Williams, Principal O. H. P. Snyder, Supt. E. E. Holt. Capt. Roberts responded for the team and presented Coach Bohyer with a fishing reel, a gift from the teams of the last two years.

Students of the home economics department under the direction of Miss Pauline Stannard and Miss Martha Mouser served for the dinner.

Four Plead Guilty To Traffic Court Charges

Four motorists, recently arrested on minor traffic offenses, entered pleas of guilty when arraigned yesterday in municipal court.

Wesley Mankers, 22, of Hastings, Mich., arrested by Patrolman Tong on a charge of speeding on North Main street yesterday afternoon, was released when he paid a $10 fine and costs.

Municipal Judge Hazen suspended the driving rights for 10 days of Phillip J. Shockney, 18, of 132 Barnhart street, arrested Sunday morning on East Center street and later charged with speeding.

Clifford O. Beardsley, 27, of near Worthington, arrested on a charge of speeding on North Main street Saturday, was released when he paid a $10 fine and costs.

Charles R. Cocherl, 20, of 501 North Greenwood street, arrested by state patrolmen on a charge of running through a stop sign on route four Saturday night, was released when he paid a $5 fine and costs.

Former Marion Woman in Elyria Accident

Bernard O'Brien, 27, of Cleveland and his wife, Carol, 23, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Davis of 684 Florence street, were seriously injured about 7:30 p. m. Sunday when their car skidded and crashed into a utility pole near Elyria.

Their 19 - month - old son, Thomas, was thrown out of the car and escaped unhurt, it was reported.

Mr. and Mrs. O'Brien had been to Elyria to visit friends and were returning to their home in Cleveland when the accident happened.

Mrs. O'Brien suffered a fractured right shoulder and leg bruises. Mr. O'Brien, who is reported to have suffered a fractured skull and severe head lacerations, is in Elyria Memorial hospital where his condition is reported serious.

Vichy Intentions Concern British

LONDON, April 7—Apprehension over the part of the Vichy government will play in the momentous events of this year is growing here in view of the emergence of Pierre Laval from the shadows, the transfer of the French battleship Dunkerque from Algiers to Toulon and the outstanding strategical importance of Madagascar to the struggle for control of the Indian ocean.

Expecting a Baby?

Mother's Friend helps bring ease and comfort to expectant mothers.

MOTHER'S FRIEND, an exquisitely prepared emollient, is useful in all conditions where a bland, mild anodyne massage medium in skin lubrication is desired. One condition in which women for more than 70 years have used it is as an application for massaging the body during pregnancy. It helps keep the skin soft and pliable, thus avoiding unnecessary discomfort due to dryness and tightness. It refreshes and tones the skin. An ideal massage application for the numb, tingling or burning sensations of the skin . . . for the tired back muscles or cramp-like pains in the legs. Quickly absorbed. Delightful to use.

Mother's Friend

Highly praised by users, many doctors and nurses. Just ask any druggist for Mother's Friend—the skin lubricant. Try it tonight.

Workman Burned By Ammonia Recovering

UPPER SANDUSKY, April 7—Reuben F. Gottfried, seriously burned in the ammonia tank explosion at the Chief Dairy plant last week, is reported as slowly improving. He is now able to see with his left eye and to a limited extent from the right. His attending physician at Marion hospital says conditions appear favorable for his complete recovery.

George F. Tschanen, less severely burned in the same accident was able to return to work, Monday.

SEEK WAR PROFITS PROBLEM SOLUTION

WASHINGTON, April 7—The senate, puzzled concerning the most effective way to curb excessive war profits, seemed inclined today to turn that big problem over to a joint senate-house conference committee.

The appropriations committee has moved to suspend the rules and consider an amendment to a $19,212,000,000 military supply bill which would restrict production profits on a graduated scale from 10 per cent on the first $100,000 of contract price down to 2 per cent on all over $50,000,000.

when this decision is made for all teachers."

In setting the date for the meeting with city and county officials and representatives of the M. E. A. to discuss the salary situation, the superintendent said arrangements were completed with County Auditor Harry V. Mounts.

Defense Classes

Discussing the national defense training classes which include a tentative setup of courses in welding and machine shop on a 24-hour, 7-day-a-week basis, the superintendent said that Marion's vocational coordinator, L. H. Rieker has been approached by the state department of education to seek a leave of absence to head special defense work for the state department. He said there was nothing further to report at present but that he wished the board to be acquainted with the distinction which the state department has offered the man responsible for Marion's vocational training.

Only part of the machinery ordered for the new shop has been procured, Mr. Holt told the board, because many of the companies with whom orders were placed have had their total output frozen by the war production board to go into plants doing war work.

"We have to start all over," he said, referring to getting the additional equipment. Companies still making machinery for sale to such concerns as the Harding shop have been listed by the state department of vocational trades and industries and are being contacted. However, Mr. Holt pointed out, from day to day this list is revised by the war production board.

May Train Outsiders

In a recent conversation with State Director of Education Hartman, Mr. Holt said he was informed there are indications of a "tremendous" demand for employes in Akron and Cleveland, and that if enough local persons do not register for defense vocational training the state department will send in trainees from outlying communities. He also said the state director brought up the question of training women for jobs in defense industries.

Defense training classes were completed last Friday for the first quarter of the calendar year. The number of classes to be carried this quarter will be determined by the number and desires of the trainees. The local advisory board on defense training has approved all-out training in the fields of welding and machine shop practice, the superintendent said.

Clerk J. D. Torrance said he wrote County Defense Coordinator William R. Martin after a special board meeting last week, asking if there was any way the board could be reimbursed for operating costs of civilian defense training classes in the schools, particularly at Harding, but had not received an answer.

Night Class Expenses

Bills for electric current consumed during the classes and the complication of burdens on custodians who are not remunerated for their services to the classes are mounting rapidly, according to both the clerk and superintendent.

The board will be paid expenses involved in permitting George D. Hildebrandt, commander of the civilian military training program, to use Central Junior High school May 14, 15 and 16 to stage an all-military minstrel show.

A letter of thanks was received from Miss Edith Treet, Girl Scout director, for use of the Vernon Heights gymnasium several weeks ago for a Girl Scout festival. The organization paid for the services of the custodian, Mr. Holt told the board.

The board authorized the superintendent and Levi Welch, superintendent of buildings and grounds to proceed with the fencing of the Greenwood school grounds, following instructions from City Solicitor Kenneth A. Robinson, and also authorized Mr. Welch to dispose of materials remaining from demolition of the old Davids Street building, mostly brick chips. Cut stone taken from the building will be offered for sale to firms using the material.

Bills amounting to $8,167.92 were ordered paid and the board granted the Odd Fellows lodge use of the Central Junior High school grounds for parking space if the state I. O. O. F. convention is held here in the summer.

The public library board, of which Mr. Holt is vice president, submitted the following resume for 1941:

"The budget commission allowed an appropriation of $18,400 from the intangible taxes for the year 1941, less $17.82 which was deducted by the county auditor for the workmen's compensation premium and $87 for the state examiner. We received $7500 state aid, which was used for our county extension work.

"The operating expense per capita, in cents, for the county and city was 28.4 as compared to 30.8 in the comparative statistics of public libraries in Ohio for the year 1940 and the cost per book circulated, in cents, 7.2.

"The total expenditures for books, binding and periodicals were $3,011.16, which was 23.3 per cent of the total library expenditures.

"We purchased 1,847 books and withdrew 665 volumes during the year.

"The circulation for the year totaled 175,894 volumes, which included 21,519 books circulated through our city school collection.

City School Books

"We have approximately 3,000 books in our city school collection, which are sent to six elementary schools as follows: Glenwood, Oakland Heights, Silver Street, Oak Street, North Main street and Mark street. We serve the Crippled school at George Washington with collections from the juvenile room of the main library. We are planning to add to our school collection in 1942, bringing it up to date with recent well-chosen titles for these boys and girls.

"We have cooperated with the teachers of the high school and the junior high schools in providing additional copies of titles included in their reading lists. We purchased books amounting to $250 for the use of the students in these schools.

"We contacted Mr. Rieker and Mr. Saine of the vocational department of the Harding High school in regard to providing books on machine shop, welding, pattern making, foundry, auto mechanics, mechanical drawing and other shop subjects for the men in their defense work classes and our borrowers. We purchased a number of books and subscribed to periodicals.

Book Week Observed

"During 'Book Week' in November talks were given and a group of attractive new juvenile books was displayed at the Glenwood school.

"Teachers of the elementary schools have brought their classes to the library. Through these visits the boys and girls have become better acquainted with their library.

"The library board desired to present to your board these brief statistics compiled by the librarian, which will help to bring to your attention what our library is attempting to do in cooperating with the schools of Marion."

After the session the board members and reporters were guests at the annual dinner for the Harding basketball squad, served in the new home economics department under supervision of Miss Pauline Stannard, home economics supervisor, and assisted by girls from her classes.

Delegates Selected by Shovel Co. Union

Fred Patton and Harold James were elected delegates to serve one year at a meeting Sunday of SWOC local 1949 of the Marion Steam Shovel Co. It was decided to sponsor an SWOC 1949 softball team this summer. In a meeting at 10 a. m. April 19 in the club headquarters special nominations for 1942-43 will be made.

1,200 Take Part In Parade at Bucyrus

BUCYRUS, April 7—Approximately 1,200 persons including four bands and various patriotic and fraternal groups took part in the Army day parade here Monday. Later more than 300 of those taking part in the celebration met at the high school for the first of the second series of training meetings for volunteer civilians defense workers.

a superiority and may have it for months.

Airmen recently returned from the fighting zones report that the best Japanese pursuit plane, the "Zero fighter," can outmaneuver the American P-40 type, although the P-40 compensates for this with greater armor protection.

Japanese pilots are excellent fliers, but American pilots have been able to outfight them repeatedly, even when greatly outnumbered.

Unfortunately one theater in which the Japanese have undertaken a determined campaign is the Philippines—where there is no prospect of aerial reinforcement.

capture of 3,100 British, Dutch and native troops.

"Among the (9001 British) are many soldiers who escaped from Singapore on a merchant steamer," Tokyo headquarters said.

United States submarines were officially credited with sinking three more enemy ships — a freighter in Japanese waters and two heavily-laden tankers near the Japanese-mandated Carolina islands, east of the Philippines.

Johnson Confers with White House

NEW DELHI, April 7—President Roosevelt's envoy to India, Louis Johnson, has been in recent touch with the White House regarding developments in the Indian independence negotiations, it was learned today, amid growing signs that the proposals were headed for rejection.

Johnson talked again with Maulana Abul Kalan Azad, president of the All-India Congress party, and Pandit Mawaharlal Nehru, a powerful congress leader, after the two had met this morning with Sir Stafford Cripps, the British war cabinet member who announced the proposals.

MARKET SPENDS RALLY POWER

Some Issues Show Strength but Market Generally Loses Zip.

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK, April 7 — Some stock market favorites continued to exhibit comeback tendencies today but the rallying sap oozed out of many leaders.

The British-Indian stalemate and the Bataan peninsula battle crisis helped chill buying enthusiasm which cropped up yesterday, brokers said. There was realizing on yesterday's bulge, best since March 17, on the idea it would be better to await more light on profits limitations legislation. At that, the idea the market still was in an oversold condition brought support for assorted issues.

Among early lifted shares were Eastman Kodak, Allied Chemical, American Airlines, Texas Co., N. Y. Central and Phelps Dodge.

American Telephone softened and occasional minus marks were posted for Western Union, U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Chrysler, Sears Roebuck, International Harvester and Standard Oil (N.J.).

In the matter of corporation profits restrictions, Wall Street found a grain of comfort in forecasts of a last-ditch fight in the senate on the proposed flat wage scale allowance on war contracts.

LIPPMANN

bols and the agents of this momentous development.

There is a very close connection, in history and in our own days, between the Union or disunion of the Western democracies on the one hand, the extension or liquidation of Eastern imperialism on the other. It is no mere coincidence that the Eastern Empire of Britain was founded in the same generation that the connection of the English-speaking peoples was shattered. British rule began in India in 1774.

The new epoch began with the fall of France and the mortal peril in which not only Britain, Canada, Australia, but also the United States were placed. This peril has brought about a partnership of the English-speaking nations that is vitally closer, because the sanctions are life or death for all of us, than any which diplomacy or propaganda could imagine or contrive. This same peril has also brought about the disestablishment of the Western empires in Asia. Out of it has come a new balance of power and a new order of association in the English-speaking world. Out of it has come to new balance of power and a new order of relationship with the East.

YOUR HEALTH

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D

Modern Idea of Dyspepsia

It takes a lot of courage on the part of the digestive tract to live through times like these. In the war of nerves, most of the nerves go to the stomach. This is called, in a scientific phrase, intestinal fortitude — in common phrase, it has a shorter and even more scientific name.

We were all stomach when in the paleozoic slime and we have never quite gotten over that. Whenever we are upset emotionally, it is reflected most delicately in the most primitive of our organs. But besides nervous dyspepsia the digestive tract is so complicated that it is not surprising that it gets out of whack on an organic basis as often as any part of the body.

Methods of detecting and making diagnoses of digestive disturbances are greatly improved in these days. Formerly we depended entirely on the history of the patient's recital of his own symptoms to make a diagnosis of abdominal disease—and often got into trouble.

There is a story of a young druggist who came back to his home town after his college course to find that his father had allowed the family drug store to run to seed and was not getting the prescription business from the three best doctors in town. So he concocted a diabolical scheme and hired an actor to go to doctors A, B and C successively.

To Dr. A he said that he had discomfort in the pit of his stomach, relieved only by food and alkaline solution. Dr. A. examined the patient, told him that he had a duodenal ulcer and at the patient's request wrote down the diagnosis and signed his name to it.

To Dr. B he said that he had discomfort under the right ribs that sometimes became acute, that radiated into the right shoulder and that sometimes he had been jaundiced. Dr. B examined him, told him that he had gall stones, and as requested wrote down the diagnosis and signed his name to it.

To Dr. C he said that he had a pain in the back that radiated around into the groin and into the front of the leg. Dr. C examined him, said that he had kidney stones, wrote down the diagnosis and signed his name.

According to the story the young druggist then took these three damning pieces of evidence to the doctors with a photograph of the actor and said that he would place the three different diagnoses and the photograph of the man in his window unless they would send him their prescriptions. According to the story it all turned out happily and they complied with his request.

The point of the story is that they had to depend entirely on the integrity of the patient's history in making their diagnoses.

Today we have many other means of diagnosis; most important of these, the X-ray. With this marvelous instrument, we can feed the patient a meal which throws a black shadow on the X-ray plate. When the stomach is filled up, we therefore have a black shadow which is the exact outline of the stomach. We can see the movements that it makes.

We can time the emptying rate and compare that with the normal. We can do the same thing with the intestines.

Besides this, we can make chemical examinations of the secretions of the different parts of the digestive tract. Lastly, we have electrically lighted instruments, something like periscopes, which can be used to see the appearance of the inside of the esophagus, the stomach, the sigmoid colon and the peritoneum.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Daily Reader: — Would the eating once a day of lamb or chicken and occasionally a little beef be injurious to one who had had a stone in the kidney?"

Answer: Scientific experiments have shown that a meat or protein diet has nothing to do either with the formation or the aggravation of a stone in the kidney.

Pitfalls of Love

By ADELE GARRISON

Madge Keeps Impostor Covered and Gets Key of Door. But Wonders What Has Delayed Gus.

WOULD I have to use my little silence pistol again? That question came forcibly into my mind as the raucous voice of the man posing as Professor Durand shouted at me.

Only to save my life and that of the fellow I gagged and bound, who, as surely as if I had seen him, I knew was lying in the next room, had I shot at the impostor's wrist.

I do not believe I would ever get over the shock if I should be the means of killing or seriously maiming even so vile a person as I knew the man before me to be. But I kept both my trigger finger and my voice steady, as I noted with inward relief that the man had not accompanied his command with a single step toward me.

Won't Take Chances

He was not yet sure, I deduced, that my accurate shot at his wrist was not a matter of luck alone, but he was taking no chances that my assertion of accuracy in aim was not correct.

He had counted upon startling me with his raucous shout, perhaps to the extent of causing a faltering in the hand which held the pistol, a faltering which would enable him to leap and snatch the pistol from me.

I met his shout with a weapon which never has failed me, a light, derisive laugh.

"You would better save your breath," I advised him. "You are going to need it. And another thing—I want the key to the door over there. You probably put it in your coat pocket — not the one with the small bulge in it, which probably holds a pistol like mine —but the other one. Put your unwounded hand into that pocket and lay the key upon that table right by you hand. And don't make any other movement, for at the least sign of one which I do not like, I shall use this pistol without mercy."

He tried to glare me down, but I met his gaze coolly.

"I am waiting," I said. "If you have not put that key upon the table when I have finished counting ten, I shall begin to shoot."

"I haven't—" he began, but I ignored him and began counting slowly. "One, two, three, four—"

He did not move until the count of five, but the steadiness of my voice and eyes must finally have convinced him, for at the count of "six" his hand went into his pocket, and well before the count of ten the key lay on the table.

"Now," I said, "back up until you get to the wall. For I had noted that behind him was a clear space, with no article of furniture within reach of a person standing there.

Impostor Obeys

"Don't delay," I admonished sharply. "Move back more! Don't turn around! Hurry!"

He obeyed, moving backward gingerly until he reached the wall.

"Now turn around," I ordered, "facing the wall and get as close as you can to it. Then raise your arms high above your head. No," as I saw him wince with pain when he tried to obey, "you need not raise your wounded arm; just the other. Now remain perfectly still. Do not dare to move. I shall have my eyes on you every second."

"You can't get away with this," he said. "Even if your man outside disposes of mine, there are more — plenty of them — coming here at once."

I laughed again, and purposely borrowed a phrase from Dicky.

Has Misgivings

"That will be just too bad—for them, and for you," I said. "Do you think I was so mad as to come here without sufficient bodyguard for any emergency? I would advise you to relax and take it easy until my men come in and attend to you. When they do, I will try to ease your wounded arm the best I can, until we can give you a physician's attention."

His only answer was a fierce muttered imprecation, to which I paid no attention. But as I moved to the door, I began to feel a distinctly empty feeling inside me. Where were Gus and the other men?
